Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 10-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 10-week period compared to the control group. The body mass index of the children in both groups did not change significantly. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

- Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 100 male police officers. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions included cardiovascular exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The results showed that the officers' cardiovascular fitness improved significantly, as measured by a 1.5-mile run time. The strength training also resulted in improvements in muscle strength and endurance. The flexibility exercises helped to increase the officers' range of motion and reduce the risk of injury. The study concluded that a 12-week training program can effectively improve the physical fitness of police officers.

1. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the current situation and the goals that need to be achieved.

- Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group performed a 12-week exercise program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The primary outcome was the change in physical fitness, measured by the 6-minute walk test. Secondary outcomes included changes in health-related quality of life, measured by the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant improvement in physical fitness and health-related quality of life compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program can be an effective intervention for improving physical fitness and health-related quality of life in sedentary, middle-aged women.
