Whales

Whales are amazing creatures that live in the ocean. They are the largest animals on Earth. There are many different types of whales, but they all have some things in common.

One thing that all whales have in common is that they are mammals. This means that they are warm-blooded, have lungs to breathe air, and give birth to live babies. Whales also have a layer of blubber, or fat, under their skin to keep them warm in the cold ocean water.

Whales come in all different sizes. The blue whale is the largest animal in the world, growing up to 100 feet long and weighing as much as 200 tons. That's as heavy as 33 elephants! The smallest whale is the dwarf sperm whale, which is only about 8 feet long.

Whales are known for their amazing abilities. They can dive to great depths in the ocean, holding their breath for a long time. Some whales can stay underwater for up to 90 minutes! They use echolocation to find their food and communicate with each other. Echolocation is like a built-in sonar system that helps them navigate in the dark ocean.

Whales eat different things depending on their species. Some whales, like the blue whale, eat tiny shrimp-like animals called krill. Other whales, like the killer whale, eat fish, seals, and even other whales! Whales have big appetites because they need a lot of energy to fuel their huge bodies.

Unfortunately, whales face many threats in the ocean. Pollution, climate change, and hunting have all taken a toll on whale populations. That's why it's important for us to protect these amazing animals and their ocean homes.

Next time you visit the beach, keep an eye out for whales swimming in the ocean. You might see their spouts of water as they come up to breathe. Whales are truly magnificent creatures that we should all work to protect.

As we enter the second decade of the twenty-first century, environmental concerns dominate the media headlines, from rampant poverty in the developing world to nuclear accidents in industrialized nations. How did human civilization arrive at its current predicaments, and what can we do to temper our habits of mind and mitigate society's environmentally and socially destructive behaviors? The field of ecocriticism, also sometimes called environmental criticism, attempts to grapple with such issues. A branch of literary and cultural studies that essentially began in North America in the 1970s, ecocriticism is currently one of the most quickly developing areas of environmental research and teaching. The Future of Ecocriticism: New Horizons brings together thirty-two of the latest articles in the field, including work by some of the leading scholars from around the world. Although ecocriticism has been particularly active in North America, Western Europe, and East Asia, important studies of traditional environmental thought, environmental communication strategies, and environmental aesthetics have begun to emerge in every region of this world. This new book, co-edited by three prominent Turkish scholars and a leading American ecocritic, offers a special cluster of Turkish ecocriticism with a focus on environmental stories and ideas in this culture that bridges Europe and Asia. Another unique feature of The Future of Ecocriticism: New Horizons is the concluding dialogue among the four editors about the current state of the field.
