3. Explain how the Second Industrial Revolution shaped various regions of the US.

Northwest

The Northwest was at the center of industrialization during the First Industrial Revolution. It contained the leading industrial regions in the Second Industrial Revolution. New York, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania produced more than 50 percent of all U.S. industrial products in 1890.

Almost 300,000 miles of railroad lines interconnected in the Northwest by 1890. The growth of railroads created a network of supporting industries. Coal mining, iron and steel, and machinery that were essential to the manufacture of machinery. The steel for use in the coal mines and iron and steel manufacturing for the growth of the mining industry in the region.

This rapid growth of a manufacturing economy created a need for specific workers. Cities in the Northwest became industrial centers like the manufacturing hub of the United States. By 1870 about 25 percent of the U.S. population was foreign born. Most of the new immigrants were in the Northwest. Most of these immigrants settled in the Northwest and the upper Midwest along the Great Lakes in Chicago.

The growth of industry also highlighted the gap between rich and poor in the region. Perhaps more than any other, the social, political, and economic differences between the rich and poor were highlighted for industrial growth. Workers without better wages and working conditions. Labor unions formed first in the United States. Miners and shipbuilders, and some of the first strikes in the United States as a bargaining tool against business owners.

Southwest

The large region experienced dramatic growth in the mining and manufacturing. The upper Midwest states along the Great Lakes—Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois—became centers of industry and a hub for shipping and transport. Cities grew rapidly, attracting large numbers of immigrants. Chicago, Illinois became one of the nation's largest cities.
