Key Dates		Significant Events
1776	Declaration of Independence signed on July 4, 1776 in Philadelphia by delegates to the Second Continental Congress.	Thomas Jefferson	Wrote the Declaration of Independence (initial draft of 17 drafts)
1787	U.S. Constitution written by delegates to the Constitutional Convention met in Philadelphia to revise the Articles of Confederation and decided to start a new form of government for the United States (the U.S. Constitution). American citizens accepted the ideas of liberty, equal rights, and democracy and created a different government for North and the South.	George Washington	Leader of the Continental Army during the Revolution, President of the Constitutional Convention and the first President (1789-97).
1861 - 1865		Events leading to the Civil War	The southern states seceded from the Union because of the Civil War. The war was fought between the North and the South.
		Reconstruction	Reconstruction period after the Civil War (1865-77). The Reconstruction period was a time of rebuilding the South and the Union.

Effects of Commercial Governmentality Experiments

Growth of representative institutions	The Magna Carta of 1215 was the first representative government document in the western world. The Magna Carta safeguard was a precursor outlining principles of self-government for western world. The fundamental theory of constitutionalism is one of the first written constitutions in the western world.	14th/15th c of constitutionalism	In written part of government for the western world, a new legal constitution of 13 early independent states. These constitutions included authority in giving new freedom and respect, especially to the citizens. In such countries, government has power to be held away from the government. Citizens had no response, and there was no national court.
Magna Carta 1215	Signed in England, this document provided limits to the power of the king.	16th Constitutionalism 17th 18th/19th	The 16th Century of the United States' introduced the Constitution by writing, protecting the citizens against 1789. It is the United States' Constitution, that we use as the foundation of government today. The constitution can be a government based on democracy in which power is vested between the state government and the federal government, government and the federal government, and state government, which is vested in each. The Constitution contains a representative democracy with three branches of government: legislative, executive, and judicial.
English Bill of Rights 1689	Passed in 1689 in England, this document guaranteed English citizens certain rights and set a procedure for electing representatives to Parliament.	Bill of Rights 1789	The Bill of Rights consists of the first 10 Amendments (changed) to the Constitution. These amendments protect individual rights such as the right, freedom of the press, and jury trial. These amendments were added to the Constitution to make the President, Congress, and the Courts more in charge to protect individual rights.
Declaration of Independence 1776	Declared the American colonies separate from England. Includes important ideas: "All men are created equal," and are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, including life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." "To secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." "Governments are ... governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."	Federalist Papers	A series of essays written to support ratification of the Constitution. Leading thinkers included Alexander Hamilton and James Madison. George Washington and Thomas Paine also supported the document. The Federalist Papers argued that the Constitution was being better than the states and monarchs. They argued against monarchy and a monarchy of the Bill of Rights, and the Constitution was approved.
