

Making Data and Fax Calls

Your mobile phone contains a modem similar to the modems you use to connect your computer to your home or office telephone service. Rather than connecting to standard telephone lines, the modem in your mobile phone connects to a data network. This allows you to transfer files between your mobile phone and a computer or another mobile phone.

Data Calls

Data calls are placed to exchange computer files between two computers. While the data connection is in place, files can be transferred between the connected devices.
