

Dear Dr. Bernard R. Glick,

I am applying for the Assistant Professor position in the Department of Biology at the University of Waterloo, which was advertised on the International Society for Microbial Ecology website. Having finished a Ph.D. with Dr. William W. Mohn at the University of British Columbia in early 2005, I am currently a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the University of Warwick under the direction of Professor J. Colin Murrell.

My research focuses on the factors affecting the diversity and composition of microbial communities, and also on the discovery of novel organisms and metabolic functions that mediate carbon and nitrogen transformations in the environment. A solid familiarity with molecular and genomic techniques, as well as extensive experience with soil and aquatic environments suggest a good fit for me as a faculty member within the Department of Biology at the University of Waterloo.

The position description indicates the importance of active research and teaching for the candidate. As the attached curriculum vitae shows, my love for research in environmental microbiology and ability to communicate effectively have resulted in numerous publications and award-winning presentations. My enthusiasm for research is matched by my desire to bring innovative teaching skills to undergraduate and graduate courses. My university teaching experience has involved multiple teaching assistantships and the supervision of several undergraduate and graduate students. This background of research and teaching excellence will be critical assets as I begin an academic position involving externally-funded research and student education.

I would welcome an opportunity to discuss the position in more detail and am excited by the possibility of contributing to the high standard of education at the University of Waterloo.

Sincerely,

Thank You Letter To Phd Dissertation Committee

Scott C. Dulebohn
