Short Story Peer-Editing Sheet

- The person you ask to edit your paper should use a red pen.
- At the end of class, collect this sheet and your marked-up rough draft. You will need to use it to make corrections for the final draft. This sheet must be attached to the back of your final draft.

Title

- Does the title of the story have a good connection to the story itself? (Does the title represent the theme, plot or characters of the story?)

Introduction

- How does the story start? (description of setting, action, details about the character, dialogue, and/or flashback)
Write down the story starter used next to the first paragraph.

Spelling, Punctuation, and Grammar

- Please note that when I grade your final draft, if you have more than five mistakes related to grammar, spelling, and punctuation, you will receive zero points for those categories. Proof carefully!
- If you happen to notice any misspelled words, incorrectly used punctuation, or grammatically incorrect phrases, please make these corrections directly on the rough draft. (commas, sentence fragments, run on sentences, spelling mistakes, missing capitals, and missing apostrophes)

Dialogue

- Are speech tags used correctly?
- Is 'said' used more than one time?
- Does the dialogue move the plot, reveal theme, or develop character?

Verb Tense Agreement

- Read the first line of the story. Is it written in past, present, or future tense? Write down which tense at the top.
- As you read through the story, cross out any verbs you notice that do not match the tense the writer has chosen for the story and write the correct verb.

Point of View Agreement

- Read the first line of the story. Is it written in 1st (I), 2nd (you), or 3rd (he/she) person? Write down which point of view at the top.
- As you read through the story, cross out any pronouns you notice do not match the point of view the writer has chosen for the story and write the correct one.

Character Development

- Who is the protagonist and what is his/her conflict? Write the name of the protagonist on the bottom of the first page.
- Who/what is the antagonist? Write antagonist on the bottom of the first page.
- How does the main character change by the end of the story? Write it down at the end of the story. If it's unclear, indicate this at the end.

Sensory Detail: Setting

- Do you have a clear picture of what/where the setting is? Write it down at the end of the story. If it's unclear, indicate this at the end.

Diction

- Circle any words which you think may be too elementary for middle school students.

Plotline

- Does the story make sense? How is the story resolved? Is the ending realistic/logical? Write a sentence which summarizes what happens at the end of the story.

Moral/Lesson

- Write down at the end of story what you think the moral or lesson was being taught in the story. Another way of looking at it is, what was the story's purpose?

Originality/Creativity

- Do you feel this story is original and creative? If not, what suggestions do you have to give the story its own unique twist?

Praise/Constructive Criticism

- What praise do you have for the author?
- What do you think the writer should change?
