Specification of a Trusted Computing Base (TCB), 1979 A Trusted Computing Base (TCB) is the totality of access control mechanisms for an operating system. A TCB should provide both a basic protection environment and the additional user services required for a trustworthy turnkey system. The basic protection environment is equivalent to that provided by a security kernel; the user services are analogous to the facilities provided by trusted processes in kernel based systems. This report documents the performance design and development requirements for a TCB for a general purpose operating system. The information in this report is made available to stimulate technical discussion among industry and government personnel.

Preliminary Analysis of a Trusted Platform Module (TPM) Initialization Process, 2007 As distributed system architectures such as peer to peer grid computing and MANET become more popular, there is an increasing need for robust and scalable mechanisms to establish trust between entities. The Trusted Platform Module (TPM) provides for the possibility to establish trust at the hardware level for commercial hardware. While work has been done to leverage TPMs for Digital Rights Management (DRM) and other schemes, application of TPMs for robust identification and authentication in a MANET or other distributed environment have not been addressed. This research provides a simple analysis on the applicability of leveraging TPMs for enhanced computer security in today's military environment. A military convoy using laptops in a MANET is used as a hypothetical concept of operations. The problem of TPM initialization of a laptop in particular at a depot prior to deployment is addressed. The initialization steps that must be performed before using a TPM in any deployment have been studied and described and suggestions are provided to address possible DoD concerns in using this technology.
