PREFACE.

THE author of this volume has long and firmly believed that "God is in history." This statement will be regarded by some persons as a mere superstition. "What a startling new idea brought up amid the elevated ideas of Christianity!" "What a mere superstition that Divine intervention in history!" "Which the very heathen have admitted!" These are the principles, emanating from God, in every nation. God is ever present on that vast theater where the struggle is going on. Because the author firmly believes this, he dares to write this history, and thereby presumes to claim a part of God's wonderful providence in the world. We may not now be able to trace the hand of God in any of the events herein recorded, but, by the aid of future generations may do so, and see clearly how, at best, but imperfectly understood. The events of life have been but imperfectly understood around them; and, in many instances, the men have been profoundly ignorant of the grand principles which were working out of their lives and deeds.
