Higher Education in the BRICS Countries Simon Schwartzman, Rómulo Pinheiro, Pundy Pillay, 2015-03-24 In spite of the increasing attention attributed to the rise in prominence of the BRICS Brazil Russia India China and South Africa countries few studies have looked at the ways in which broader social expectations with respect to the role of higher education across the BRICS have changed or not in recent years Our point of departure is that contrary to the conventional wisdom focusing on functionalistic perspectives higher education systems are not just designed by governments to fulfill certain functions but have a tendency for evolving in a rather unpredictable fashion as a result of the complex interplay between a number of internal and external factors In reality national higher education systems develop and change according to a complex process that encompasses the expectations of governmental agencies markets the aspirations of the population for the benefits of education the specific institutional traditions and cultures of higher education institutions and increasingly so the interests and strategies of the private firms entering and offering services in the higher education market This basically means that it is of outmost importance to move away from conceiving of universities or higher education as single monolithic actors or sector One way of doing this is by investigating a selected number of distinct but nonetheless interrelated factors or drivers which taken together help determine the nature and scope of the social compact between higher education its core actors and institutions and society at large government industry local communities professional associations      ECRM2016-Proceedings of the 15th
