The Science of Successful Organizational Change Paul Gibbons, 2015-05-15 Every leader understands the burning need for change and every leader knows how risky it is and how often it fails To make organizational change work you need to base it on science not intuition Despite hundreds of books on change failure rates remain sky high Are there deep flaws in the guidance change leaders are given While eschewing the pat answers linear models and change recipes offered elsewhere Paul Gibbons offers the first blueprint for change that fully reflects the newest advances in mindfulness behavioral economics the psychology of risk taking neuroscience mindfulness and complexity theory Change management ostensibly the craft of making change happen is rife with myth pseudoscience and flawed ideas from pop psychology In Gibbons view change management should be euthanized and replaced with change agile businesses with change leaders at every level To achieve that business education and leadership training in organizations needs to become more accountable for real results not just participant satisfaction the edutainment culture Twenty first century change leaders need to focus less on project results more on creating agile cultures and businesses full of staff who have get to rather than have to attitudes To do that change leaders will have to leave behind the old paradigm of

Higher Education and the Common Good Simon Marginson, 2016-12-19 In the last half century higher education has moved from the fringe to the centre of society and accumulated a long list of functions In the English speaking world Europe and much of East Asia more than two thirds of all school students enter tertiary education Bulging at the seams universities are meant to be fountains of new knowledge engines of prosperity and innovation drivers of regional growth skilled migration and global competitiveness and makers of equality of opportunity Yet universities cannot drive prosperity on their own and they can do little to stop rising income inequality which is shaped by taxation policy and income determination in the workplace Worse the growing emphasis on the private benefits of higher education without regard for its public benefits has positioned the higher education sector as elite forming as a maker of social inequality rather than a corrective to it In the English speaking countries in which government sees itself as servant of high capitalism official policy models higher education as a market and has narrowed its purpose to the enhancement of individual earnings and employability partly to justify the ever rising tuition fees Higher education systems have become intensely competitive and increasingly stratified with value concentrated at the top In this quasi aristocratic economics of education mass institutions are losing social value and the collective public benefits of universities are unmonitored underfunded and ignored In short governments expect both too much and too little of higher education and its contribution to the common good is being eroded Yet this sector can play a key role in rebuilding social solidarity and mobility in fractured societies
