Public Private Partnerships for Urban Water Utilities Philippe Marin, 2009-09-22 Public Private Partnerships for Urban Water Utilities A Review of Experiences in Developing Countries analyzes the market growth of Public Private Partnerships PPPs in the developing world since 1990 and the performance of more than 65 large water PPP projects representing more than 100 million people for access service quality operational efficiency and tariff levels Although a relatively small portion of the water utilities in the developing world are operated under PPPs about 7 percent in 2007 the urban population served by private water operators has grown every year since 1990 Despite many difficulties encountered by PPP projects and a few contract terminations a large majority of contracts awarded since 1990 are still in place The track record for improving service and efficiency reaffirms the value of PPPs to help turn around poorly performing water utilities even though the level of private financing did not match initial expectations Over time a more realistic market has developed the number of private investors from developing countries has grown and contract designs have become more pragmatic concerning risk allocations between partners The water sector has many features that set it apart from other infrastructure sectors This book suggests the need for careful consideration of those specificities to successfully involve private operators Although concessions with private financing have worked in a few places contractual arrangements that combine private operation with public financing appear to be the most sustainable option in many countries Policy makers stakeholders and donors need to remain heavily engaged in the water sector especially in the poorest countries and during a global financial crisis This book contributes to a better understanding of the various options to tackle the many challenges of providing water and sanitation services to urban populations in the developing world

Planning and Design for Sustainable Urban Mobility Un-Habitat,2013-10-30 Urban transport systems worldwide are faced by a multitude of challenges Among the most visible of these are the traffic gridlocks experienced on city roads and highways all over the world The prescribed solution to transport problems in most cities has thus been to build more infrastructures for cars with a limited number of cities improving public transport systems in a sustainable manner However a number of challenges faced by urban transport systems such as greenhouse gas emissions noise and air pollution and road traffic accidents do not necessarily get solved by the construction of new infrastructure Planning and Design for Sustainable Urban Mobility argues that the development of sustainable urban transport systems requires a conceptual leap The purpose of transportation and mobility is to gain access to destinations activities services and goods Thus access is the ultimate objective of transportation As a result urban planning and design should focus on how to bring people and places together by creating cities that focus on accessibility rather than simply increasing the length of urban transport infrastructure or increasing the movement of people or goods Urban form and the functionality of the city are therefore a major focus of this report which highlights the importance of integrated land use and transport planning This new report of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme UN Habitat the world s leading authority on urban issues provides some thought provoking insights and policy recommendations on how to plan and design sustainable urban mobility systems The Global Report on Human Settlements is the most authoritative and up to date global assessment of human settlements conditions and trends Preceding issues of the report have addressed such topics as Cities in a Globalizing World The Challenge of Slums Financing Urban Shelter Enhancing Urban Safety and Security Planning Sustainable Cities and Cities and Climate Change
