Course Overview

This course is a survey of the history of the United States from the end of Reconstruction to the present. Throughout the semester we will explore the nature and development of the United States by analyzing various political, economic, social, and cultural issues. We will also look at domestic challenges facing the American people such as the Great Depression, World War II, Civil Rights, and Vietnam, and the ways in which they found solutions to these challenges. Rather than merely memorizing dates and names, we will actively explore history through lecture presentations, textbook and primary source readings, film, photography, music, and discussion.

Learning Outcomes

By the end of the semester, the following objectives will be achieved:

- Students will demonstrate knowledge about United States history since 1877, specifically major themes and developments, through written assessment and online discussion.
- Students will be able to make thematic connections across time.
- Students will become familiar with the basic skills of a historian through primary source analysis, cultural critique, and visual and oral analysis.
- Students will develop their writing and critical thinking skills through encountering competing and conflicting historical interpretations, analyzing these interpretations, and then writing about it.
