in Developing Asia Evelyn Goh, 2016-04-22 Rising China has been reshaping world order for the last two decades but this volume argues that we cannot accurately understand rising China's global impacts without first investigating whether and how its growing power resources are translated into actual influence over other states choices and policies Concentrating on the developing countries in East and South Asia where the power asymmetry is greatest and China ought to have the biggest influence the volume investigates China's influence in bilateral relationships and on key political actors from these countries within key issue areas and international institutions Using an influence framework the volume demonstrates how China tends to try to gain the support of smaller and weaker countries without forcing them to change their preferences or to act against their own interests China does purposefully coerce induce or persuade others to behave in certain ways but whether and the extent to which it succeeds is determined as much by the reactions political context and decision making processes of the target states as it is by how skilfully Chinese actors deploy these tools The contributors detail how China's influence even over these weaker states does not result from easy applications of power rather it tends to be mediated through the competing interests of target state actors the imperatives of other existing security and economic relationships and more complex strategic thinking than we might expect The book's findings carry lessons for conceptual refinement as well as policy implications for those coping with China's reshaping of international order      Official Gazette of the United States

Rent Seeking and Development Christine Ngoc Ngo, 2020-03-25 Rent seeking continues to be a topic of much discussion and debate within the political economy This new study challenges previous assumptions and sets out a new analysis of the dynamics of rent and rent seeking in development using Vietnam as a case study This book provides an alternative approach to the study of economic development and illuminates new perspectives in a contemporary context It argues that not only has there been an incomplete understanding of Vietnam's industrial development over the last three decades but that neoclassical economics do not adequately address many of the issues endangering Vietnam's development A significant observation of the Vietnamese experience is the analytical view that rents can be developmental and growth enhancing if the configuration of rent management incentivizes industrial upgrade and conditions firm performance Underlining the need to reexamine how economic actors and the state collaborate through formal and informal institutions this study fills a gap in the scholarship of the political economy of rent and rent seeking and how rents might be used for developmental purposes
