Introduction to Gender Studies in Eastern and Southern Africa James Etim, 2016-07-28 Africa has witnessed massive changes in the last fifty years from independence through structural adjustment rule by military juntas in several countries and to a period now where the focus is on how best to prioritize their needs based on resources national goals and human potential. There is general agreement that human capital is important in economic growth and development. There is always the need to ensure that resources and human capital are used appropriately to advance development. Gender disparities whether in treatment access to resources resource utilization and the law may in themselves retard or slow down development. Resources and human potential in all societies include how best to ensure there is no gender disparity and to fully tap the resources inherent in women for personal social and national development. Beginning with the women's suffrage movement there has been the push to encourage gender equality worldwide. The Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing in 1995 embodies the commitment of the international community to implement policies that will enhance the political social economic educational empowerment of women. This book highlights the issues affecting women in Eastern and Southern Africa what role does custom and patriarchy play in gender disparities in education access to health problems in the workplace and family relationships. How have women writers in the last twenty years presented the issues of patriarchy women s rights globalism and women s holistic development What are recent developments that have helped improve the situation for some women These are some of the issues that are covered in this book The thesis of this book is that there have been policies and strategies developed that have worked to empower women However vestiges of sexism gender disparities in several fields still remain and traditions customs and patriarchy have aided in still keeping women down div div Research Anthology on Microfinance

Trade in Zimbabwe Richard Newfarmer,Martha Denisse Pierola,2015-05-26 In Zimbabwe trade has been a driver of economic growth rising incomes and progressive empowerment of Zimbabweans through rising standards of living and the promise of better jobs Since 1980 through good years and bad years increases in exports have been positively associated with increases in national income Zimbabwe s location and resource base together with a low cost but relatively well educated labor force have endowed it with a naturally high trade ratio built on a diversified base that facilitates using trade as an engine of growth While trade volumes have rebounded smartly from the deep recession of 2007 2008 these do not offset other worrisome longer term trends Export growth during the last decade has been lacklustre and failed to drive high growth Agricultural exports other than tobacco have lost their once dominant role in the region and are no longer a source of diversification Manufacturing has withered in a continuing secular decline Zimbabwe s export basket has become less diversified and more dependent on a narrow range of mineral and to a lesser extent agricultural products In short exports have become less diversified less technologically sophisticated and less labor intensive and ever more dependent on a few large mining activities to provide foreign exchange and employment This report traces the roots of this poor performance to several policy issues poor predictability of macroeconomic policy and economic governance has created an unfavorable climate for private investment and trade a tariff structure that dampens export profitability industrial policies indigenization policy in particular that undermine investor confidence and inhibits private investment and finally competition limiting policies toward services that limit connectivity of Zimbabweans and raise trade costs The good news arising from the study is that the remedies for these policy shortcomings lie in Zimbabwean hands If the government were to adopt reforms that reconfigure economy wide incentives and trade and industrial policies it could promote sustained growth economic diversification and empowerment of poor people South Africa Recent Economic and Political Developments
