McIntosh, Aunt Kitty s Tales Good morning my young friend A merry Christmas or happy New Year or at least a pleasant holiday to you for holiday I hope it is as it is on such festivals when there is no danger of lessons being forgotten that I best love to see around me a group of happy children all the happier for having Aunt Kitty to direct their plays to show them the pleasantest walks or when they are tired both of playing and walking to sit with them by the fireside and tell them some entertaining story I am never however entirely without such young companions I have always with me an orphan niece Harriet Armand who is about ten years old Her father and mother died when she was quite an infant and she has ever since been to me as my own child

Then I have another niece Mary Mackay just six years old the merriest little girl on whom the sun ever shone who as her father lives quite near me spends part her mother says the largest part of every day with me Besides these there are Susan May and Lucy Ellis who living in a neat pretty village near us seldom let a fine day pass without seeing Harriet and me I am the very intimate and confidential friend of all these little girls To me they intrust all their secrets I know all the pleasant surprises they intend for each other am consulted on birth day presents and have helped them out of many troubles which though they might seem little to larger people were to them very serious affairs I encourage them to tell me not only what they say and do but what they think and feel Sometimes when they are a little fretful and discontented because their friends have not done just as they wished we talk the matter over together and find that they have themselves been unreasonable and then the fretfulness is dismissed and they try by a very pleasant manner to make amends for their hard thoughts and unjust feelings If any one has really injured them or been unkind to them and I find them too angry easily to forgive it I bid them put on their bonnets and we go out together to look for their good humor Then as we see the gay flowers and inhale the sweet perfumes and listen to the merry birds that hop around us twittering and chirping my little friends forget to be angry and while I talk to them of the good Father in heaven who made all these beautiful and pleasant things for his children on earth they feel such love and thankfulness to him that it seems easy for his sake even to forgive those who have done them wrong These are Aunt Kitty s lessons they are lessons for the heart and such as I hope all my readers will be pleased to learn The walk which these little girls and I best love is to a small house about half a mile from mine Small as it is it looks so pleasantly with its white walls it is freshly whitewashed every spring and green shutters its neat paling and pretty flower garden peeping from the midst of green trees that any one might be contented to live there In this house lives a widow with one only child a daughter a year older than my niece Harriet I will tell you their story which I think will make you feel almost as much interested in them as we do and you will then understand why we like them so well and visit them so often About three years ago my little friends Susan May and Lucy Ellis began to talk a great deal of a child who had lately come to the school in the village which they attended They said her name was Alice Scott that her teachers thought a great deal of her because she learned her lessons so well and that her schoolmates loved her because she was so good humored and merry She had told them that she used to live a great way off and that her father and mother had left her other home because it was sickly and had come here because they had heard it was a healthy place The girls said Alice looked very well herself but that Mrs Scott was pale and that Alice said she was often sick A stranger and sick thought I then I must go to see her and so I did very soon
