The Launch Pad Randall E. Stross, 2013 Investment firm Y Combinator is the most sought-after home for startups in Silicon Valley. Twice a year it funds dozens of just-founded startups and provides three months of guidance from Paul Graham, YC's impresario, and his partners, also entrepreneurs and mostly YC alumni. The list of YC-funded success stories includes Dropbox, now valued at $5 billion, and Airbnb, $1.3 billion. Receiving an offer from YC creates the opportunity of a lifetime, it's like American Idol for budding entrepreneurs. Acclaimed journalist Randall Stross was granted unprecedented access to Y Combinator's summer 2011 batch of young companies, offering a unique inside tour of the world of software startups. Most of the founders were male programmers in their mid-twenties or younger. Over the course of the summer, they scrambled to heed Graham's seemingly simple advice: make something people want. We watch the founders work round the clock, developing and retooling products as diverse as a Web site that can teach anyone programming to a Wikipedia-like site for rap lyrics to software written by a pair of attorneys who seek to make attorneys obsolete. Founders are guided by Graham's notoriously direct form of tough love feedback. "Here we don't fire you," he says. "The market fires you. If you're sucking, I'm not going to run along behind you saying 'You're sucking, you're sucking, c'mon, stop sucking.' Some teams would even abandon their initial idea midsummer and scramble to begin anew. The program culminated in Demo Day, when founders pitched their startup to several hundred top angel investors and venture capitalists. A lucky few attracted capital that gave their startup a valuation of multiple millions of dollars. Others went back to the drawing board. This is the definitive story of a seismic shift that's occurred in the business world in which coding skill trumps employment experience: pairs of undergraduates confidently take on Goliaths, tiny startups working out of an apartment, scale fast, and investors fall in love."

A Practical Education Randall Stross, 2018-09-04 The liberal arts major is often lampooned lacking in skills unqualified for a professional career underemployed But studying for the joy of learning turns out to be surprisingly practical Unlike career focused education liberal education prepares graduates for anything and everything and nervous fuzzy major students their even more nervous parents college career center professionals and prospective employers would do well to embrace liberal arts majors Just look to Silicon Valley of all places to see that liberal arts majors can succeed not in spite of but because of their education A Practical Education investigates the real world experiences of graduates with humanities majors the majors that would seem the least employable in Silicon Valley s engineering centric workplaces Drawing on the experiences of Stanford University graduates and using the students own accounts of their education job searches and first work experiences Randall Stross provides heartening demonstrations of how multi capable liberal arts graduates are When given a first opportunity these majors thrive in work roles that no one would have predicted Stross also weaves the students stories with the history of Stanford the rise of professional schools the longstanding contention between engineering and the liberal arts the birth of occupational testing and the popularity of computer science education to trace the evolution in thinking about how to prepare students for professional futures His unique blend of present and past produces a provocative exploration of how best to utilize the undergraduate years At a time when institutions of higher learning are increasingly called on to justify the tangible merits of the liberal arts A Practical Education reminds readers that the most useful training for an unknowable future is the universal time tested preparation of a liberal education

The New Patriarchs of Digital Capitalism Ben Little, Alison Winch, 2021-06-23 This book offers an original critique of the billionaire founders of US West Coast tech companies addressing their collective power influence and ideology their group dynamics and the role they play in the wider sociocultural and political formations of digital capitalism Interrogating not only the founders political and economic ambitions but also how their corporations are omnipresent in our everyday lives the authors provide robust evidence that a specific kind of patriarchal power has emerged as digital capitalism's mode of command. The New Patriarchs examined over the course of the book include Sergey Brin and Larry Page of Google, Elon Musk of Tesla, Jeff Bezos of Amazon, Mark Zuckerberg of Facebook, and Peter Thiel. We also include Sheryl Sandberg. The book analyses how these mostly men legitimate their rapidly acquired power, tying a novel kind of socially awkward but visionary masculinity to exotic forms of shareholding. Drawing on a ten million word digital concordance, the authors intervene in feminist debates on patriarchy, masculinity, and postfeminism, locating the power of the founders as emanating from a specifically racialised structure of oppression tied to imaginaries of the American frontier, the patriarchal household, and settler colonialism. This is an important interdisciplinary contribution suitable for researchers and students across Digital Media, Media and Communication, and Gender and Cultural Studies.

Tech Olivier Alexandre, 2025-09-23 The first holistic analysis of the space mindset and inner workings of Silicon Valley in a generation. Sometimes only an outsider can show how an industry works and how that industry works upon the world. In Tech, sociologist Olivier Alexandre takes us on a revealing tour of Silicon Valley's prominent personalities and vibrant networks to capture the way its denizens live, think, relate, and innovate, and how they shape the very code and conduct of business itself. Even seasoned observers will gain insight into the industry's singular milieu from Alexandre's piercing eye. He spends as much time with Silicon Valley's major players as with those who fight daily to survive within a system engineered for disruption. Embedded deep within the community, Alexandre accesses rooms shut tight to the public and reports back on the motivations, ambitions, and radical vision guiding tech companies. From the conquest of space to quantum computing, engineers have recast the infinitely large and small. Some scientists predict the end of death and the replacement of human beings with machines. But at what cost? Alexandre sees a shadow hanging over the Valley, jeopardizing its future and the economy made in its image. Critical yet fair.

Tech illuminates anew a world of perpetual revolution
