The One-Way Effort: A Love Story of Mismatched Commitment Jeany Sims,2023-03-04 The One Way Effort is a love story about a couple who have mismatched levels of commitment in their relationship The story follows the protagonist who is deeply in love with their partner but struggles with the fact that their partner does not reciprocate the same level of commitment Despite the disparity the protagonist puts in significant effort to make the relationship work They go out of their way to surprise their partner with thoughtful gestures and romantic outings and they even sacrifice their own desires and interests to accommodate their partner's needs. However, as time goes on, the protagonist begins to realize that their one-way effort is unsustainable. They feel exhausted and unfulfilled by the constant imbalance in their relationship and they start to question whether their partner truly loves them. In the end, the protagonist must make a difficult decision: continue to invest in a one-sided relationship or walk away and find someone who will love them with the same intensity. The story ultimately explores the painful reality that love cannot thrive on a one-way street and the importance of finding a partner who is equally committed.

Anna Anna Matilda King, 2010-04-15 As the wife of a frequently absent slaveholder and public figure Anna Matilda Page King 1798-1859 was the de facto head of their Sea Island plantation. This volume collects more than 150 letters to her husband, children, parents, and others. Conveying the substance of everyday life as they chronicle King's ongoing struggles to put food on the table, nurse her family, black and white, and keep faith with a disappointing husband, the letters offer an absorbing firsthand account of antebellum coastal Georgia life. Anna Matilda Page was reared with the expectation that she would marry a planter, have children, and tend to her family's domestic affairs. Untypically, she was also schooled by her father in all aspects of plantation management, from seed cultivation to building construction. That grounding would serve her well. By 1842, her husband's properties were seized owing to debts amassed from crop failures, economic downturns, and extensive investments in land, enslaved workers, and the development of the nearby port town of Brunswick. Anna and her family were sustained, however, by Retreat, the St. Simons Island property left to her in trust by her father. With the labor of fifty bondpeople and their increase, she was to strive with little aid from her husband to keep the plantation solvent. A valuable record of King's many roles, from accountant to mother, from doctor to horticulturist, the letters also reveal much about her relationship with and attitudes toward her enslaved workers. Historians have yet to fully understand the lives of plantation mistresses left on their own by husbands pursuing political and other professional careers. Anna Matilda Page King's letters give us insight into one such woman who reluctantly entered but nonetheless excelled in the male domains of business and agriculture.
