Maternal DHA Impact on Child Neurodevelopment Asim K. Duttaroy,2021-09-07 In this Special Issue we focus on maternal docosahexaenoic acid 22 6n 3 DHA and arachidonic acid 20 4n 6 ARA on children s neurodevelopment During the last trimester of gestation and for the first 18 months after birth both DHA and ARA are preferentially deposited within the cerebral cortex at a rapid rate The mode of action of these two fatty acids and their derivatives at different structural functional roles and their levels in the signaling pathways of the brain have been continuously studied These fatty acids are also involved in various brain developmental processes however their mechanistic cross talks are not yet clearly known Recent data suggest that there may be a need for a balanced proportion of ARA and DHA in infant formula due to their complementary benefits This review describes the importance of ARA in addition to DHA to support optimal brain development and growth in an infant and functional roles in the brain Handbook of public health in natural disasters

Ronald Ross Watson,Joseph A. Tabor,John E. Ehiri,Victor R. Preedy,2023-08-07 The combination of growing populations moving into large cities in high risk zones increase the risk of natural disasters with a substantial public health consequence A high population density and rapid air travel increase the spread and effects of plagues and diseases People in countries with limited resources are more vulnerable to death and other consequences of disasters This requires global rather than national preparedness and response strategies Public health organisations government and non government organisations can take a leadership role and provide training organisation and research knowledge to improve responses to such disasters This book is the first holistic public health approach in relation to natural disasters It fills the gap to have a one stop shopping synopsis of key ideas associated with mediation of public health natural disasters It is unique in focusing on lessons learned rather than what to do Published research relating to general responses by public health agencies to disasters is scientifically evaluated Various types of disasters are reviewed flooding diseases earthquakes volcanoes and drought Long term needs prevention and individual preparation are taken into account The information can be used to prepare and mitigate effects of disasters The summary points at the start of each chapter will help the reader to use as this book as reference book and for educational purpose

Dietary Omega-3 Polyunsaturated Fatty Acids and Cancer Gabriella Calviello, Simona Serini, 2010-01-22 Dietary Omega 3 Polyunsaturated Fatty Acids and Cancer provides all the latest information on the possible benefits of omega 3 polyunsaturated fatty acids PUFAs against a wide series of cancers Several influential scientists in this field have contributed to make this book unique amongst the others published so far in this field The chapters give detailed information about the results obtained in this field through experimental studies conducted on both animals and cultured cells as well as through human intervention trials and epidemiological observational studies This book represents an important tool for researchers working in nutrition and oncology since it collects all the knowledge about omega 3 PUFAs and cancer even the most recent in a single publication For the first time controversies among the different studies are also covered with great detail in this book The book enables physicians to clearly understand on a scientific basis if their oncologic patients or patients at risk of cancer could actually benefit from a diet enriched in omega 3 PUFAs or from a dietary supplementation with these fatty acids The book represents also a good resource for ordinary individuals as well as cancer patients to learn more about omega 3 PUFAs and understand how these dietary components may affect cancer growth

Patients and Medical Professionals Tonio Schoenfelder, Tom Schaal, Anja Mocek, 2024-11-12 Digital health applications DHAs are increasingly being used in patient care in various healthcare systems around the world In some countries such as Belgium and Germany legal frameworks already allow for DHA integration into standard care and their prescription and uniform reimbursement via the patient's health insurance In many other European countries and the USA such a process is still in development DHAs are primarily used by patients themselves but also in consultation with physicians therapists or other healthcare providers They offer the potential for improved health outcomes and increased access to health services especially in rural areas and may lead to an overall improvement in the quality of care The validity of studies on the effects of DHAs on patients and health care systems in general is currently limited since study methods applied do often not allow for drawing causal relationships and most studies focus only on patient outcomes but do not assess how traditional care processes need to be adapted so that DHAs can be effective Therefore unambiguous evidence on which patient relevant outcomes can be improved specifically as a result of integrating DHA into the process of care is currently lacking
