Question 1 (1 point)
The following table shows the number of hours per week that a sample of 100 students spend studying for their exams. The data is summarized in the following frequency distribution table. What is the mode of the data?

Hours per week	Frequency
0-5	15
6-10	25
11-15	30
16-20	20
21-25	10

Answer 1 (1 point)
The mode of the data is 11-15.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. The body mass index of the children in the experimental group also increased significantly. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, maximum power, and maximum speed. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for all four measurements at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported depression in a community sample of young adults and to examine the association between self-reported depression and self-reported health status, self-reported stress, and self-reported social support. Methods: A cross-sectional survey of 1,000 young adults (ages 18–29) was conducted. The survey included questions about self-reported depression, self-reported health status, self-reported stress, and self-reported social support. Results: The prevalence of self-reported depression was 12.5%. Self-reported depression was significantly associated with self-reported health status, self-reported stress, and self-reported social support. Conclusions: Self-reported depression is a common condition in young adults and is associated with self-reported health status, self-reported stress, and self-reported social support.

QUESTION I have a 1997 Ford Taurus with 100,000 miles. The car has been in the shop several times for engine problems. The engine has been replaced twice. The first time it was replaced by a used engine, and the second time it was replaced by a new engine. The car is still having problems. The engine is running rough, and the car is shaking. The oil pressure is low, and the engine is making a knocking sound. What could be the problem?

ANSWER The most likely cause of the engine problems is a worn or damaged engine. The fact that the engine has been replaced twice suggests that the original engine was not properly installed or that it was damaged during the replacement process. The symptoms you describe, such as rough running, shaking, low oil pressure, and knocking sounds, are all indicative of a worn or damaged engine. It is important to have the engine inspected by a qualified mechanic to determine the exact cause of the problem and to recommend the appropriate repair.

1. Identify the problem. What is the problem you are trying to solve?
2. Define the problem. What are the symptoms of the problem?
3. Generate hypotheses. What are the possible causes of the problem?
4. Test the hypotheses. What evidence do you have to support or refute each hypothesis?
5. Implement the solution. What actions do you need to take to solve the problem?
6. Evaluate the solution. How do you know you have solved the problem?

QUESTION A 60-year-old male with a 20-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports that he has been unable to eat as much as he used to and has lost about 10 pounds. He also mentions that he has been feeling more tired than usual and has noticed some changes in his vision. He has no recent travel history and no known contact with anyone who has been ill. He is currently on insulin therapy and has no other medical conditions. His last medical check-up was 6 months ago, where his blood sugar levels were well-controlled. He is a retired construction worker and lives with his wife. He has no smoking history and consumes alcohol occasionally. He is concerned about his symptoms and wants to know what might be causing them.

ANSWER The patient's symptoms are suggestive of a systemic illness, possibly a malignancy. The weight loss, fatigue, and decreased appetite are common symptoms of cancer. The changes in vision could be related to hyperglycemia or a complication of diabetes. The patient's long history of diabetes and the fact that his blood sugar levels were well-controlled 6 months ago suggest that the current symptoms are not directly related to his diabetes. The absence of recent travel history and contact with someone who has been ill makes an infectious etiology less likely. The patient's age and the duration of his symptoms further support the possibility of a malignancy. The next step would be to perform a thorough physical examination and order laboratory tests, including a complete blood count, comprehensive metabolic panel, and tumor markers. Imaging studies, such as a CT scan or PET scan, may also be indicated to identify any potential masses or metastases.
