Expressive Processing Noah Wardrip-Fruin, 2012-02-10 From the complex city planning game SimCity to the virtual therapist Eliza how computational processes open possibilities for understanding and creating digital media What matters in understanding digital media Is looking at the external appearance and audience experience of software enough or should we look further In Expressive Processing Noah Wardrip Fruin argues that understanding what goes on beneath the surface the computational processes that make digital media function is essential Wardrip Fruin looks at expressive processing by examining specific works of digital media ranging from the simulated therapist Eliza to the complex city planning game SimCity Digital media he contends offer particularly intelligible examples of things we need to understand about software in general if we understand for instance the capabilities and histories of artificial intelligence techniques in the context of a computer game we can use that understanding to judge the use of similar techniques in such higher stakes social contexts as surveillance
