PARTICLE THEORY AND STATES OF MATTER

Particle theory explains the properties of matter by describing the arrangement of particles in a substance. The particles in a substance are made up of different types of particles. The arrangement of particles explains the properties of the substance. The particles in a substance are made up of different types of particles. The arrangement of particles explains the properties of the substance.

States of Matter Matter can exist in three primary states: solid, liquid, and gas. In each state, the particles are arranged differently. In a solid, the particles are packed closely together. In a liquid, the particles are more spread out. In a gas, the particles are very spread out and move freely.

Changes of State Matter can change from one state to another. This is called a change of state. The change of state is caused by a change in the energy of the particles. For example, when a solid melts, the particles gain energy and move more freely.
