Applications of Sine and Cosine Graphs Learning Task:

Trigonometry functions are often used to model periodic data. Let's look at a few examples of real-world situations that can best be modeled using trigonometric functions.

Answer any two of the following 3 questions.

1. Musical Tones

There is a scientific difference between noise and pure musical tones.

A random jumble of sound waves is heard as noise.
Regular, evenly spaced sound waves are heard as tones.
The closer together the waves are the higher the tone that is heard.
The greater the amplitude the louder the tone.

Trigonometric equations can be used to describe the initial behavior of the vibrations that give us specific tones, or notes.

- Write a sine equation that models the initial behavior of the vibrations of the note G above middle C given that it has amplitude 0.015 and a frequency of 392 hertz.
- Write a sine equation that models the initial behavior of the vibrations of the note D above middle C given that it has amplitude 0.25 and a frequency of 294 hertz.
- Based on your equations, which note is higher? Which note is louder? How do you know?
