Research two different reflective models. Examples are Gibbs, Kola and Christopher Johns. Briefly describe and compare them. Looked at all three reflective models and chose to describe Johns and Kola. The Johns model is very in-depth and seems to target a wider area of thought and contemplation. It would also be a good tool to discuss with another more senior member of staff, who would have their own emotional response to each situation, therefore giving you a slightly different outcome. This would be ideal when paying supervision or discussing an incident in an objective manner.

The start of the model really gets into the way in which you are feeling and this can dramatically change the outcome of the reflection that is taking place. I think that this is a type of grounding, a way of getting into the present moment and making you more mindful of the situation in hand. This is different from the Kola model because you have to look at yourself first, which is very beneficial. The Gibbs model is slightly less descriptive and a little shorter but it still offers a way of transforming information into knowledge, which is needed, so we can learn more about the client or situation that we are reflecting on. The Kola model starts with observations and reflections and finishes with concrete experience. Concrete experience is what we strive for to make us grow as support workers. In my opinion the main comparison between the two is that the Johns model is better for personal development within ourselves and the Kola model is better for a greater knowledge about those we work with.

2. Decide which one you prefer. Explain why. Prefer the Johns model because it focuses more on the way that we are feeling in the here and now.

This can have a massive impact on a situation in the work place because it allows us to view others and ourselves. Reacting positively to a negative situation is not always easy, so having a degree of emotional intelligence can go in the favor of all parties concerned. I like learning more about clients and how can make my role go more smoothly but I think that having knowledge about oneself and how I react to things will be more beneficial to me personally.

3. Consider a task that you have recently completed at work, which has not gone so well. This could be :

- Manual handling.
- Communication.
- Challenging behavior.
- Falls.

Using your preferred model of reflection, describe what happened, what went wrong, what went right, what you could do differently next time? Was asleep and I heard shouting coming from upstairs. I checked my watch and went upstairs and discovered that the noise was coming from a clients room. I asked if he was OK and I was asked to go away in a not so polite tone or wording. I asked the client to keep the noise down, as he would wake the other concerns relating to privacy protection Many of these concerns can also apply to research that uses other personal data but not with the same implications for failure The norms of exclusivity associated with a private life go beyond the current legal concept of personal data to include genetic data that relates to multiple identifiable individuals simultaneously and anonymous data that could be associated with any number of individuals in different but reasonably foreseeable contexts It is the possibilities and implications of association that are significant and these possibilities can only be assessed if one considers the interpretive potential of data They are missed if one fixates upon its interpretive pedigree or misunderstands

 the meaning and significance of identification This book demonstrates how the public interest in research using genetic data might be reconciled with the public interest in proper privacy protection Nursing Basic for Clinical Practice Mr. Rohit
