

THE SOLE PROPRIETORSHIP

This is considered the oldest, simplest and the most popular form of agribusiness organization. In most developed nations of the world, the agribusiness sole proprietorship is a very popular form of organization but the organization structure of the business tends to be affected seriously by inadequate finance.

Agricultural sole proprietorship has only one owner who takes all the risks, enjoys all the profit and makes all the managerial decisions. He therefore takes the responsibilities (risks) of all that results from these decisions. In Nigeria, about 80% of the people are engaged as sole proprietors in agribusiness enterprises with more than 50% engaging in the production field of agricultural, forestry and fishery.

It should be noted that this form of agribusiness does not need any formal application to be approved by the government before starting operation. Because they are not registered legally, they do not pay taxes except they are recognized by tax collectors.

Advantages

1. The owner exerts complete control over plans, programmes, capital, policies and other management decisions.
2. Legal formalities are not necessary and license fees are low.
3. Termination or modification of the agribusiness is easy.
4. Under good financial standing of the proprietor, lenders would be most willing to extend lending (funds) to the proprietorship.
