Walking In The Footsteps Of Paul Chambers:

Walking in the Footsteps of Paul Chambers ,2003-05-01 Walking In the Footsteps of the Fallen Christina Holstein,2019-04-30 A visit to the battlefield of Verdun is usually dominated by the forts of Douamont and Vaux the museum at Fleury and the striking huge Ossuary Although this gives a flavor of the horrific fighting that took place in the area particularly in 1916 the visitor will be hard pressed to get much more than an impression from such places This book seeks to guide the battlefield pilgrim into parts of the battlefield that get rarely visited by means of a series of walks a number of which include the major sites The four tours have been carefully walked All are practicable for a reasonably healthy adult the tours vary in length most taking a half day to complete and the longest the last a day In a twist to the usual walks to be found in the Battleground series Christina makes full use of the numerous field graves and isolated memorials that are to be found on the Verdun battlefield a number of which will bring visitors to the most visited sites In the course of these walks many physical remnants will be found such as gun positions bunkers and trench systems the significance of which is fully explained The walks have not been chosen at random by following these the tourer will get a far greater understanding of why the fighting at Verdun developed as it did and why such places as Fort Vaux were so significant to both sides The field graves and memorials to the combatants very often of individuals provide an opportunity to give their story and the unit action in which they were fighting when they were killed Verdun is a battlefield where the story of units and individuals can easily become lost in the horror of the incessant fighting that raged over ten months and over ground which is extremely difficult to read because of the post war forestation program Profusely illustrated and with excellent mapping a hallmark of Christina Holstein s books a visitor who follows the walks in this book will be left with a far clearer idea of the men who fought and died here and of the features of the battlefield and their significance in this battle that so challenged the endurance of the armies of two nations unremarkable undulating ground that was to become firmly placed in British national conscience ever afterwards At the end of October 1914 an increasingly desperate Falkenhayn aware that his offensive in Flanders had stalled decided to make one final effort to break through the Allied lines south of Ypres Pulling together a large strike force the so called Army Group Fabeck he launched a violent offensive designed to capture the Messines Ridge and to use this dominating terrain as a springboard for a further advance Inadequately resourced assembled in a rush this thrust was soon in trouble Confused fighting in the wooded areas to the south of the Menin Road slowed the advance and initial attempts to gain a foothold on the ridge failed A supreme effort by the men of the 26th Infantry Division ultimately brought about the capture of the town of Messines and similar heroics by the Bavarian 6th Reserve Division led to the fall of Wytschaete but it was all in vain Yet again a valiant Allied defence had buckled but not broken

Aisne 1918 David Blanchard, 2015-06-20 This battlefield guide and history will focus mainly on the events of attack that fell on the British sector of the front between the 27th 1st June 1918 although the offensive which also befell the French forces will not be totally neglected This area had been a French held sector since 1915 and the French had fought one of its major engagements of the war here in 1917 the ill fated Nivelle Offensive French monuments and cemeteries dominate the landscape The British were also here in 1914 and they too have left reminders of their relative brief presence However the actions fought here early in the war tend to be found mainly to the west of the sector The battlefield of May 1918 scales the heights of the Chemin des Dames ridge along the Calforne Plateau and descends to afforested valley of the Aisne river and canal The retreat of the British forces during the course of the first day and in following days extends further south almost to the Marne and takes in part of the Champagne region
