On the other hand, perhaps some citizens in an authoritarian society feel that they are being held off by the government and that they are not getting what they need. They may feel that the government is not doing enough to protect them from the dangers of the world, and they may feel that the government is not doing enough to protect them from the dangers of the world. They may feel that the government is not doing enough to protect them from the dangers of the world, and they may feel that the government is not doing enough to protect them from the dangers of the world.

Following the initial findings, we hypothesized that the observed association between low levels of testosterone and increased aggression may be mediated by the hormone "cortisol." Cortisol levels represent your physiological response to stress, and we believe that low testosterone levels may be associated with increased cortisol levels, which in turn may lead to increased aggression.

Investigations are in progress. All other activities are being carried out as normal.
