information to hand and comes to a very different conclusion that urban planners ruin great cities because they don't understand that it is a city's social interaction that makes it great. Proposals and policies that are drawn from planning theory do not consider the social dynamics of city life. They are in thrall to futuristic fantasies of a modern way of living that bears no relation to reality or to the desires of real people living in real spaces. Professionals lobby for separation and standardization, splitting commercial, residential, industrial, and cultural spaces. But a truly visionary approach to urban planning should incorporate spaces with mixed uses together with short walkable blocks, large concentrations of people, and a mix of new and old buildings. This creates true urban vitality. A Marxian Critique of the New Urban Sociology Jim Kemeny, 1982

Urbanization and the Migrant in British Cinema Gareth Millington, 2016-11-09. This book examines a cycle of films about migration made in the late 1990s and 2000s. It argues that these films present a novel and radical aesthetic of planetary urbanization based upon the mobility of the migrant and the dissolution of the city. A stimulating cinematic analysis of our expanding urban fabric, it offers an alternative to the cultural cityism of many other films about migration. The author demonstrates that this particular film cycle offers a rare sustained consideration of the travails and struggles for urban life by migrants beyond and without the city. Yet the city haunts these films like a spectre, the city that has been lost, the present city that excludes, and the possible cities of refuge of the future. Offering new insights into the cinematic portrayal of the figure of the migrant and how this is constructed in relation to urbanization processes, this book will appeal to students and scholars of sociology, film, and media studies, human geography, and urban studies.
