Product Standards, Exports and Employment Rajat Acharyya, 2006-03-30 Through the process of globalization the trade dependence and interdependence of the developing countries have increased phenomenally than ever before. The characteristic of this late twentieth century globalization process has been the new technological revolution that has led to a high rate of world exports of electronics and other high technology products. This has marginalized most of the developing countries exporting largely the low quality and low value addition manufacturing and primary products, barring a few exceptions like China, India, and Mexico. The fruits of globalization have therefore been unevenly distributed so far across the developed and the developing countries. Moreover, whatever little growth in exports of medium technology products has been achieved by a few of them is largely driven by outsourcing of low value addition and low stage of activities by the foreign multinationals. Outsourcing of software services rather than development of software packages in India and assembly line for automobiles in Mexico are the two glaring examples. These activities may have boosted the total exports of these countries but they have failed to generate any feedback effect on the rest of the economy in terms of skill formation, increase in overall productivity level, and product diversification.

Protocols and Architectures for Wireless Sensor Networks Holger Karl, Andreas Willig, 2007-10-08 Learn all you need to know about wireless sensor networks. Protocols and Architectures for Wireless Sensor Networks provides a thorough description of the nuts and bolts of wireless sensor networks.
