

Building the Straight Walls

1. Since I wanted a height of around eight feet, I made a mold by joining a top and bottom plate made from eight-foot 2x4's with vertical eight-foot 2x4's spaced 24 inches apart to create.
2. The short wall was made the same way but using vertical 2x4's cut to 6'6" and a half inches. I measured the short end of the side walls to get this dimension.

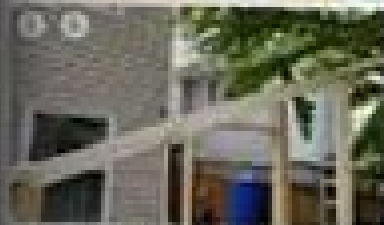

Putting it All Together

1. Lay the eight-foot wall on the ground.
2. Stand one side wall up, attaching it to place.
3. Tie the joint with the opposing wall leaving the walls if required.
4. Stand the eight-foot wall up, spacing up the walls afterwards.
5. Attach the short wall.

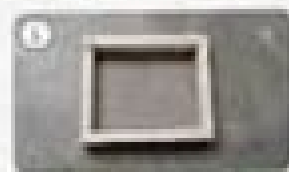

Putting on the Roof

1. Cut three 2x4's that will become the rafters at the appropriate angle to fit between the two walls and flush with the top plates. To fasten these walls, place a 2x4 underneath the top plates as shown above, and install a cut line on both ends of the 2x4.
2. Secure the rafters in place.
3. Cut two 2x4's to fit in between the rafters. These will make the opening for the ventillation windows. Once you have determined the window's location and size, secure these 2x4's in place to make that opening.

Make the Door and Window

1. Measure both the door and window frames and cut 2x4's to build a door and window that will be at least a quarter of an inch smaller than the frames.
2. Join these frames together and reinforce them to keep them square.
3. Attach square barrier to these frames with hinges.

Finishing the Greenhouse

1. Wrap the greenhouse in square barrier the piping or you go.
2. Cut an opening in the square barrier for the window and secure the square barrier with staples.
3. Wrap the roof in the square barrier and secure it with staples.
4. Install the door and window.

Things to Consider

There are a few things that you should consider now that you have a functional greenhouse.

- Install a thermometer/hygrometer so you can monitor and regulate the conditions in the greenhouse.
- Install some LED lights that are either low voltage or battery operated.
- Installing a fan will help you to control the conditions inside the greenhouse. You could use a switch that allows you to activate the fan when the inside of the greenhouse gets too humid for the plants you are cultivating.
- Keep a heater inside the greenhouse for use in the winter when the greenhouse has difficulty staying warm.

Food security is paramount in a grid-down situation and having a greenhouse is an important step to extending your growing season. The upfront cost of building a simple greenhouse will pay off dividends in fresh homegrown produce and herbs.
