

The heir to the A&P fortune is very rich; and the very rich are different from you and me by THOMAS B. MORGAN

GEORGE HUNTINGTON HARTFORD, 2d, is a dead-pan, high-strung man who was born very rich and who has been spinning off expensive "projects" in recent years like sparks from a well-oiled pin-wheel. "I am basically a man of philosophical nature," Hartford says. "I am interested in ethics, why we're here, philosophy—that interests me more than anything else in life." Another $250,000 is loaned out to a pal who used it to start a liquor store. He's dropped a tidy bundle on a play which he wrote and produced, which flopped twice, and which he plans to produce yet again in London. He has a task force of magazine people working up layouts for a new national monthly in the entertainment field, some television folks organizing an international TV festival for his island, and is himself hoping to produce more shows, write some books, and maybe make some movies.

Of such are Hartford's projects: some interesting, some dreary, some raising the question of responsibility—couldn't the money be better spent some other way? On all of them, there is the mark of a man in sincere pursuit of his goal. But, as Dr. Friedman has pointed
