Community-based adaptation Hannah Reid, 2017-10-02 Community based adaptation CBA to climate change is based on local priorities needs knowledge and capacities Early CBA initiatives were generally implemented by non government organisations NGOs and operated primarily at the local level Many used bottom up participatory processes to identify the climate change problem and appropriate responses Small localised stand alone initiatives are insufficient to address the scale of challenges climate change will bring however The causes of vulnerability such as market or service access or good governance also often operate beyond the project level Larger organisations and national governments have therefore started to implement broader CBA programmes which provide opportunities to scale up responses and integrate CBA into higher levels of policy and planning This book shows that it is possible for CBA to remain centred on local priorities but not necessarily limited to work implemented at the local level Some chapters address the issue of mainstreaming CBA into government policy and planning processes or into city or sectoral level plans e g on agriculture Others look at how gender and children s issues should be mainstreamed into adaptation planning itself and others describe how tools can be applied and finance delivered for effective mainstreaming This book was published as a special issue of Climate and Development

The Cambridge Handbook of Disaster Risk Reduction and International Law Katja L. H. Samuel, Marie Aronsson-Storrier, Kirsten Nakjavani Bookmiller, 2019-02-28 The number intensity and impact of diverse forms of natural and human made disasters are increasing In response the international community has shifted its primary focus away from disaster response to prevention and improved preparedness The current globally agreed upon roadmap is the ambitious Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015 2030 central to which is the better understanding of disaster risk management and mitigation Sendai also urges innovative implementation especially multi sectoral and multi hazard coherence Yet the law sector itself remains relatively under developed including a paucity of supporting DRR law scholarship and minimal cross sectoral engagement Commonly this is attributable to limited understanding by other sectors about law's dynamic potential as a tool of disaster risk mitigation despite the availability of many risk related norms across a broad spectrum of legal regimes This unique timely Handbook brings together global and multi sector perspectives on one of the most pressing policy issues of our time

Future is Urban Utpal Sharma, Swati Kothary, Vibha Gajjar, 2024-06-07 Global concerns and local problems are increasing not only in urban areas but also in regions where the human impact is minimal The global consequences of exploiting and irreversibly utilising natural resources are becoming evident Climate change characterised by erratic weather patterns and global warming has become prevalent around the world This has resulted in the increased occurrence of many calamities such as floods droughts heat waves and other related disasters The efficacy of decision making processes determines the alternative methods for discovering solutions and ensuring readiness for future

Management Alejandro Lopez-Carresi, Maureen Fordham, Ben Wisner, Ilan Kelman, Jc Gaillard,2013-11-12 There is a perennial gap between theory and practice between academia and active professionals in the field of disaster management This gap means that valuable lessons are not learned and people die or suffer as a result This book opens a dialogue between theory and practice It offers vital lessons to practitioners from scholarship on natural hazards disaster risk management and reduction and developments studies opening up new insights in accessible language with practical applications It also offers to academics the insights of the enormous experience practitioners have accumulated highlighting gaps in research and challenging assumptions and theories against the reality of experience Disaster Management covers issues in all phases of the disaster cycle preparedness prevention response and recovery It also addresses cross cutting issues including political economic and social factors that influence differential vulnerability and key areas of practice such as vulnerability mapping early warning infrastructure protection emergency management reconstruction health care and education and gender issues The team of international authors combine their years of experience in research and the field to offer vital lessons for practitioners academics and students alike Disaster Diplomacy Ilan Kelman,2011-08-31

When an earthquake hits a war zone or cyclone aid is flown in by an enemy many ask Can catastrophe bring peace Disaster prevention and mitigation provide similar questions Could setting up a flood warning system bring enemy countries together Could a regional earthquake building code set the groundwork for wider regional cooperation This book examines how and why disaster related activities do and do not create peace and reduce conflict Disaster related activities refer to actions before a disaster such as prevention and mitigation along with actions after a disaster such as emergency response humanitarian relief and reconstruction This volume investigates disaster diplomacy case studies from around the world in a variety of political and disaster circumstances from earthquakes in Greece and Turkey affecting these neighbours bilateral relations to volcanoes and typhoons influencing intra state conflict in the Philippines Dictatorships are amongst the case studies such as Cuba and Burma along with democracies such as the USA and India No evidence is found to suggest that disaster diplomacy is a prominent factor in conflict resolution Instead disaster related activities often influence peace processes in the short term over weeks and months provided that a non disaster related basis already existed for the reconciliation That could be secret negotiations between the warring parties or strong trade or cultural links Over the long term disaster related influences disappear succumbing to factors such as a leadership change the usual patterns of political enmity or belief that an historical grievance should take precedence over disaster related bonds This is the first book on disaster diplomacy Disaster politics interactions have been studied for decades but usually from a specific political framing covering a specific geographical area or from a specific disaster framing As well plenty of quantitative work has been completed yet the data limitations are rarely admitted openly or thoroughly analysed Few publications bring together the topics of disasters and politics in terms of a disaster diplomacy framework yielding a grounded qualitative scientific point of view on the topic

Adapting to Climate Change in Urban Areas, 2007 This paper discusses the possibilities and constraints for adaptation to climate change in urban areas in low and middle income nations These contain a third of the world's population and a large proportion of the people and economic activities most at risk from sea level rise and from the heatwaves storms and floods whose frequency and or intensity climate change is likely to increase Section I outlines both the potentials for adaptation and the constraints Section II discusses the scale of urban change Section III considers direct and indirect impacts of climate change on urban areas and which nations cities and population groups are particularly at risk This highlights how prosperous well governed cities could generally adapt but most of the world's urban population lives in cities or smaller urban centres ill equipped for adaptation A key part of adaptation concerns infrastructure and buildings but much of the urban population in Africa Asia and Latin America lack the infrastructure to adapt Most international agencies have long refused to support urban programmes especially those that address these problems Section IV discusses innovations by urban governments and community organizations and in financial systems that address such problems including the relevance of recent innovations in disaster risk reduction for adaptation It notes how few city and national governments are taking any action on adaptation

Section V discusses how local innovation in adaptation can be encouraged and supported at national scale and the funding needed to support this Section VI considers the mechanisms for financing this and the larger ethical challenges that achieving adaptation raises especially the fact that most climate change related urban and rural risks are in low income nations with the least adaptive capacity including many that have contributed very little to greenhouse gas emissions

Collaborative Relationships in Construction Hedley Smyth, Stephen Pryke, 2009-01-28 The book collects the latest research on both contractual and conceptual collaborative practices in construction It identifies common problems faced by the industry and draws out practical implications Construction projects are increasingly run in ways that undermine the traditional boundary of the firm and sometimes also the definition of the project coalition This poses challenges for construction firms whose clients demand ever increasing performance improvements as well as those firms who want to improve their strategies for greater collaboration to give themselves competitive advantage The editors identify three main themes collaborative relationships operating both in frameworks and within networks of contacts e g relational contracting in partnering supply chain management and other procurement driven initiatives The second theme is frameworks both contractual frameworks binding parties together over a series of contracts and conceptual frameworks used to develop future performance improvement arising from the proactive strategies of firms The third theme is the network of relationships that supports individuals and firms within the project coalition in delivering services and adding value to improve performance These networks define the investment and incentives supporting the inter firm and intra firm relationships as well as the formal contractual conditions through which such incentives flow Networks of information exchange define the structure of the activity and help predict organisational configurations for successful project outcomes

Multi-hazard Approaches to Civil Infrastructure Engineering Paolo Gardoni, James M. LaFave, 2016-06-22 This collection focuses on the development of novel approaches to address one of the most pressing challenges of civil engineering namely the mitigation of natural hazards Numerous engineering books to date have focused on and illustrate considerable progress toward mitigation of individual hazards earthquakes wind and so forth The current volume addresses concerns related to overall safety sustainability and resilience of the built environment when subject to multiple hazards natural disaster events that are concurrent and either correlated e g wind and surge uncorrelated e g earthquake and flood cascading e g fire following earthquake or uncorrelated and occurring at different times e g wind and earthquake The authors examine a range of specific topics including methodologies for vulnerability assessment of structures new techniques to reduce the system demands through control systems instrumentation monitoring and condition assessment of structures and foundations new techniques for repairing structures that have suffered damage during past events or for structures that have been found in need of strengthening development of new design provisions that consider multiple hazards as well as questions from law and the humanities relevant to the management of natural and human made hazards
