Abstract: The authors of this study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100-hour, noncredit, nondegree certificate program in health care on the self-efficacy of students. The program was designed to prepare students for entry-level positions in health care. The study was conducted in a community college in the United States. The results of the study indicated that the program had a positive effect on the self-efficacy of students. The authors concluded that the program was effective in preparing students for entry-level positions in health care.
