

The Mammalian Cardiovascular System

The cardiovascular system is made up of a pump, the heart, and a system of interconnecting tubes, the blood vessels. The blood always remains within these vessels and so the system is known as a closed blood system.

- Blood is pumped out of the left ventricle into the aorta and travels from there to all parts of the body except the lungs.
 - It then returns to the right side of the heart in vena cava.
 - This is called systemic circulation
- The blood is pumped out of the right ventricle into the pulmonary arteries, which carry it to the lungs.
 - Final part of the journey is along the pulmonary veins, which return it to the left side of the heart
 - This is called the pulmonary circulation

BLOOD VESSELS

The vessels making up the blood system are of three main types.

1. Arteries carry blood AWAY from the heart
2. Veins carry blood TOWARDS the heart
3. Linking veins and arteries, taking blood to cells, are tiny vessels - capillaries.

A. ARTERIES

The function of arteries is to transport blood, swiftly and at high pressure to tissues.

Structure of the wall enables it to perform this job sufficiently.

Have walls made up of three layers:

1. Inner endothelium (lining tissue), called tunica intima, - made up of a layer of flat cells called squamous epithelium, fitting together like jigsaw pieces.

- a. Layer is very smooth, minimising friction with the moving blood.
2. A middle layer called the tunica media containing smooth muscle, collagen and elastic fibres
3. An outer layer called tunica externa containing elastic fibres and collagen fibres.

- The distinctive characteristic of an artery are its strength and elasticity
- Blood leaving the heart is at a very high pressure. To withstand such pressure, artery walls must be extremely strong. This is achieved by:
 - Thickness and composition of the artery wall
- Arteries have the thickest walls of any blood vessel - aorta - largest artery has an overall diameter of 2.5 cm close to the heart.
- The tunica media, the thickest part of the wall, contains large amounts of elastic fibres allowing the wall to stretch as pulses of blood surge through at high pressure.
- Arteries further away from the heart have fewer elastic fibres in the tunica media but more muscle fibres.

= Elasticity in artery walls is important as it reduces the likelihood that they burst.

= BUT ALSO, elasticity has another function:

- Blood is pumped out of the heart in pulses, rushing out at HP as the ventricles contract and slowing as ventricles relax.
- The artery wall stretches as HP blood surges into them and then recoils inwards as pressure drops.
 - When HP blood surge in, artery becomes wider reducing pressure a little
 - When blood at LW enters artery, coils inward, raising pressure a little

Overall effect = even out flow of blood

New Approaches to the Study of Marine Mammals Aldemaro Romero, Edward O. Keith, 2012-11-07 The highly specialized nature of marine mammals when compared with their terrestrial counterparts the environment in which they live and the impact of humans on them throughout history and at the present have made of the scholarship on these creatures something unique in itself Therefore it is not surprising that many researchers have also taken a distinctive approach to their study This volume is aimed at providing a glimpse at such diversity of views and approaches while delivering valuable information on marine mammalogy Given the increasing concerns regarding issues of anthropogenic factors affecting these animals it is not surprising that the majority of chapters in this book deal with this subject

Physiology of Marine Mammals Michael Castellini,Jo-Ann Mellish,2023-07-05 Suppose you were designing a marine mammal What would they need to live in the ocean How would you keep them warm What design features would allow them to dive for very long periods to extreme depths Do they need water to drink How would they minimize the cost of swimming and how would they find their prey in the deep and dark These questions and more are examined in detail throughout Marine Mammal Physiology which explores how marine mammals live in the sea from a physiological point of view This undergraduate textbook considers the essential aspects of what makes a marine mammal different from terrestrial mammals beyond just their environment It focuses on the physiological and biochemical traits that have allowed this group of mammals to effectively exploit the marine environment that is so hostile to humans The content of this book is organised around common student questions taking the undergraduate s point of view as the starting point Each chapter provides a set of PowerPoint slides for instructors to use in teaching and students to use as study guides New Study Questions and Critical Thinking Points conclude each chapter which are each motivated by a Driving Question such as How do mammals stay warm in a cold ocean or How do mammals survive the crushing pressures of the deep sea Full colour images and comprehensive accessible content make this the definitive textbook for marine mammal physiology Self Study Guide for PVT 2022
