

- Export sales are very sensitive to changes in exchange rates
 - Exports become more expensive (cheaper) in the foreign currencies of the importing countries when the domestic (i.e., home) currency of the manufacturer strengthens (weakens)
- Outsourcing to lower-wage manufacturing plants is a centuries-old phenomenon
 - Outsourcing often imports innovation and access to highly skilled analytical capabilities in testing and design as well as exporting lower-skilled jobs
 - Containerized ocean shipping is cheap, and yet, outsourcing costs must include increased costs of vendor selection, quality control, intellectual property insurance, and expatriate management compensation
- The Chinese $7.3 trillion economy is understated by nominal exchange rates.
 - A purchasing power parity measure would be $11.3 trillion
- For more than a decade, China has grown at 9 to 15 percent with liberalized private property rights, assembly plants for multinational outsourcing, and a booming retail domestic sector
 - In the aftermath of the global financial crisis, China is the engine for growth worldwide as major trading partners export to its burgeoning middle class
- Major currencies are traded in the foreign exchange markets; there are markets for U.S. dollars as foreign exchange, British pounds as foreign exchange, euros as foreign exchange, and so forth
 - Demand and supply in these markets reflect the speculative and transactions demands of investors, import-export dealers, corporations, financial institutions, the International Monetary Fund, central bankers, and governments throughout the global economy
- Companies often demand payment and offer their best fixed-price quotes in their domestic currency because of transaction risk exposure and operating risk exposure to exchange rate fluctuations
 - Alternatively, such companies can manage the risk of exchange rate fluctuations themselves by setting up internal or natural hedges involving foreign dual plants as well as financial hedges involving forward, option, or currency swap contracts
- Internal hedges may be either balance sheet hedges addressing translation risk or operating hedges matching anticipated foreign sales receipts with anticipated expenses in that same foreign currency
 - Financial hedges often address transaction risk exposure by using financial derivative contracts to offset cash flow losses from currency fluctuations
 - On average, such hedging costs about 5 percent of the value at risk

The novel begins with Richard Papen, a bright but troubled young man, arriving at Hampden College. Richard is immediately drawn to the group of students who call themselves the Classics Club. The club is led by Henry Winter, a brilliant and charismatic young man. Henry is obsessed with Greek mythology and philosophy, and he quickly draws Richard into his world. The other members of the Classics Club are equally as fascinating. Bunny Corcoran is a wealthy and spoiled young man who is always looking for a good time. Charles Tavis is a quiet and reserved young man who is deeply in love with Henry. Camilla Macaulay is a beautiful and intelligent young woman who is drawn to the power and danger of the Classics Club. The students are all deeply in love with Morrow, and they are willing to do anything to please him. Morrow is a complex and mysterious figure, and he seems to be manipulating the students for his own purposes. As the students become more involved with Morrow, they begin to commit increasingly dangerous acts.
