

HEALTH SCIENCE REASONING TEST (HSRT) 2024

Assumption-A claim that is accepted as the truth without sufficient evidence

Inference-When someone is making an inference, they are coming to a conclusion which is based on evidence, which in turn brings the individual to their conclusion. The conclusion however isn't explicit, but rather implied from the evidence. Inferences are different to assumptions because they are based on some evidence. However, inferences aren't always correct, and shouldn't be accepted as truth.

Definitely true-Given all the information in the passage, it is certainly the case that this inference is correct

Probably true-Given all the information in the passage, it is likely that the inference is correct. However, it is not guaranteed.

Insufficient data to say whether it is true or false-Given all of the information in the passage, it is impossible to say whether the inferences is true or false

Probably false-Given all of the information in the passage, it is likely that the inference is incorrect. However, it is not guaranteed.

Definitely false-Given all of the information in the passage, it is impossible for the statement to be correct.

Interpretations-Similar to inferences, but focus on whether a conclusion logically follows from a statement. For example, if it's made clear that there can only be white and black swan in the world, an interpretation of this statement would be that there's no such thing as a green swan.

Deductions-Similar to interpretations, but are stricter in their logical format. Valid deductive arguments are arguments which, if all premises are true, then the conclusion cannot be false.

Example: Premise 1: The book is on the shelf

Premise 2: If the book is on the shelf, then it isn't on the floor.

Conclusion: The book is not on the floor.

Evaluations-Determine how strong an argument is by comparing it to the information its based on. What constitutes a strong or weak argument usually depends on how relevant the argument is, how well supported it is by the statement, and whether or not it avoids argumentative fallacies.

What is a logical fallacy?-A statement that is given as support but is really an error in reasoning

Strawman-Misrepresenting someone's argument to make it easier to attack

Slippery slope-This is a conclusion based on the premise that if A happens, then eventually through a series of small steps, through B, C..., X, Y, Z will happen, too, basically equating A and Z. So, if we don't want Z to occur, A must not be allowed to occur either. Example:

If we ban Hummers because they are bad for the environment eventually the government will ban all cars, so we should not ban Hummers.

Hasty generalization-This is a conclusion based on insufficient or biased statement. In other words, you are rushing to a conclusion before you have all the relevant facts.

Example: Even though it's only the first day, I can tell this is going to be a boring course.

Research on Teaching Strategies and Skills in Different Educational Stages Pedro Gil-Madrone, Linda Saraiva, Luisa Losada-Puente,2025-03-19 The teaching practice becomes a reciprocal activity in the classroom when teachers apply their creativity and their knowledge resulting from research and scientific evidence in the didactic teaching process with the purpose of strengthening in the students the key competencies of their training turning students at the core of the didactic process Teaching strategies must be articulated from previous research and planning and designed sequentially to promote real and interesting learning scenarios and thereby achieve significant learning From this perspective of teaching learning strategies the reciprocal interaction between the student and the teacher becomes the focus of attention with a playful motivating interesting and rewarding approach for the learner The role of the teacher is conceived as fundamental in the teaching process to achieve the link between teaching learning and evaluation strategies For this reason multidisciplinary studies are welcome from all stages of the educational system with quantitative qualitative and mixed approaches and reviews promoting good teaching practices of reflection and innovation from these studies Research in Education ,1970 The Publishers' Trade List Annual ,1893 Study Material
