

Connecting Your Laptop with the SMART GoWire™ Cable

SMART

Need to collaborate on a SMART Board® interactive whiteboard using your laptop? This guide shows you how to connect a laptop with a Microsoft® Windows® operating system to an interactive whiteboard.

The SMART GoWire auto-launch cable contains SMART Meeting Pro™ software and SMART Product Drivers so you don't have to install them on your laptop. The cable connects to a USB receptacle on your laptop and launches SMART Product Drivers.

Use this cable when you want to:

- Collaborate using a laptop that doesn't have SMART software installed
- Work with software that isn't installed on the meeting room computer

To display your desktop on the interactive whiteboard

1. Connect your laptop to the interactive whiteboard using the projector video cable (VGA or HDMI)

2. Press the Input button on the interactive whiteboard control panel  or projector remote . If you have an appliance-based interactive whiteboard system, press the laptop icon  on the appliance control panel.

The interactive whiteboard now displays your desktop.

Ensure your desktop is cloned rather than extended. When your desktop is cloned the interactive whiteboard duplicates your desktop on the interactive whiteboard. This setting makes the SMART Business Toolbar available on the interactive whiteboard. When your desktop is extended rather than cloned, you can't see your desktop icons on the interactive whiteboard and you have to drag open application windows onto the interactive whiteboard screen.

To clone your desktop

The procedure may vary depending on your video card software.

1. Right-click your desktop and select your video card software from the drop-down menu
2. Find display settings and select clone desktop

Contact your IT administrator if you need help.

To connect the SMART GoWire cable

1. Connect the USB A plug on the SMART GoWire cable to a USB A receptacle on your laptop

2. Connect the USB A receptacle on the SMART GoWire cable to the USB A plug on the CAT 5 USB extender that runs from the right end of the interactive whiteboard pen tray
