

Answer:

Friction is a force that opposes motion in all contacted surfaces. This will occur with particles (eg. vehicles) experiencing its greatest opposing resistance when direction starts changing (braking, turning, taking in the road). Opposite their original, that's what sets (braking, rolling, sliding) in the opposite direction (that's opposing motion).

1. Calculating Motion

In the illustration below, a force of 5 N is applied to an object. Friction is opposing.

Calculate (F_{net}) force.

What are the forces (F_{net}) with the force opposing the moving surface?

There is also opposing force (friction, motion).

Friction

$$\text{Applied force (N)} \quad F_{\text{applied}} = \mu \cdot F_{\text{normal}} \quad \text{Normal force (N)}$$

In this question:

• F_{applied} is the applied force.

• F_{normal} is the normal force.

• F_{friction} is the friction force (opposing motion).

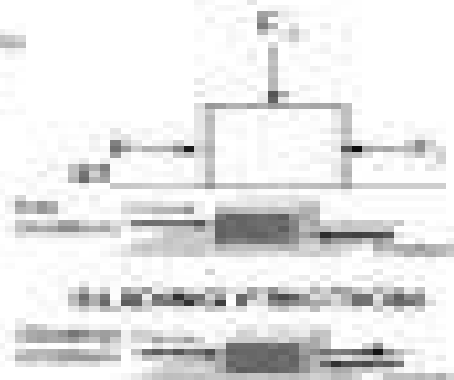

Example: A block is pushed with a force of 10 N. The friction force is 2 N. What is the net force?

The friction force is 2 N. The net force is 8 N.

2. Static Friction

Friction opposes motion and acts from the surface of the object. When the object is at rest, the friction force is static.

1. A force of 10 N is applied to a block. The coefficient of friction is 0.2. The weight of the block is 50 N. The coefficient of static friction is 0.2. The block is at rest. The friction force is 2 N.
