² These findings will also benefit those who are looking for ways to improve the quality of their work and the quality of their lives.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, at a pace of 3.0 to 3.5 miles per hour. The control group was instructed to continue with their current level of activity. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the women. The women in the walking program showed significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, body composition, and psychological well-being compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
