

LIBERATING CRITICISM: LIBERATING FORM AND THOUGHT. A PRELIMINARY COMPARATIVE STUDY OF SHONA AND SWAHILI POETRY

ROBERTO GAUDIOSO

This article is a comparative study of the critiques of developments in Shona and Swahili poetry that began in 1970s Tanzania and 1980s Zimbabwe, after the introduction of regular patterns in Shona poetry (late 1950s) and of free verse in Swahili literature (late 1960s). These verse forms became the object of heated debate about the nature of 'tradition' and of 'colonial' innovation among scholars, intellectuals and poets. These debates went beyond notions of stylistic canons; rather, they focused on identity, as closely connected with tradition and the need for decolonization. The problem recognized in this paper is that this criticism became prescriptive, implying the risk of limiting verbal-artistic expression in terms of style and content. This article shows a continuity between these different contexts in relation to critical opposition to stylistic innovation and freedom of (expressing) thought. By comparing the poetry and philosophy of the Tanzanian poet Euphrase Kezilahabi and Zimbabwean poet Chirikure Chirikure, this paper problematizes the terms of these debates and proposes an inductive and aesthetic approach to texts that avoids prescriptivism.

Keywords: Swahili poetry, Shona poetry, comparative literature, criticism, African poetry

Introduction

According to Aiello, Gaudio, & Minerba (2020:313), the traditional form of Swahili poetry still prevails in literary competitions and newspapers to the present day. In realizing how this prevailing tendency has played an important role as a form of prescriptive criticism of Swahili poets, intellectuals, and sometimes even Swahilists, I decided to compare this situation with that of the Shona textual tradition, as prescriptive criticism, by definition, can limit the freedom of artists and poets and obstruct poetic experimentation or innovation. This article represents my first written engagement with Shona literature, a field that I have been exploring especially by comparing two poets, the Swahili Euphrase Kezilahabi and the Shona Chirikure Chirikure, about whom I am planning to write in the near future.

In this paper, I discuss and compare critical approaches to Shona and Swahili poems of the 1950s in relation to the issue of freedom in writing. In both literary contexts, literary criticism has contributed to prescriptivism in the sense that it has indiscriminately validated or, on the contrary, denied the status of poetic works. The aim of this paper is to problematize approaches to literature based on the concept of authenticity and point to the potential risks such approaches pose in limiting the pursuit of an author's own style and possibilities of expression. Even if approaches that prioritize authenticity claim to preserve the richness of African heritages, in their attempt to prevent changes, they end up being, as Kezilahabi (1981:37, 1985:3573-58) argues, an assurance of the death of traditions. Zimbolicious Anthology: Volume Five Rinos Mwanaka, 2020-11-20 Zimbolicious Anthology An Anthology of Zimbabwean Literature and Arts Vol 5 is the fifth in this yearly journal of Zimbabwean literature and the arts as it happens. The poetry covers a range of subjects: love, spirituality, religion, migration, poet's vocation, and as usual, the political direction or situation in the country. The fiction deals with a wide range of issues: from religious contrivance in Gwiriri's story, drug problem and corruption in Mutize's story, the political and economic strife in Tokwe's story, and the personal trauma story in Chikomo's car accident story. In the nonfiction section, we have Muchuri's illuminating essay on another Zimbabwe storyteller, Ignatious Mabasa's Shona books. Zvikomborero Kapuya harks back to the land issue as the starting point and catapult to the misunderstandings between Zimbabwe and her erstwhile foreign enemies. Chikono writes his painful life story on shame families carry when a family member has a child out of wedlock, worst when the child is disabled, and Mwanaka has a small philosophical vignette essay on choice. The visual section is heralded by Nhevera's iconic brushworks depicting movement and portraiture, and Mwanaka has an array of art pieces from documentary photography, experimental photography, water colour, computer graphic, and installation, wrapping up this new offering.

Emerging Perspectives on Dambudzo Marechera A. J. Chennells, Flora Veit-Wild, 1999. Regarded by some as mad and by others as a genius, Zimbabwean writer Dambudzo Marechera is today, ten years after his death, considered to be one of the most innovative writers that Africa has produced. This new book is a collection of critical essays devoted entirely to Marechera's work and includes contributions from academics in Zimbabwe, South Africa, Italy, Nigeria, Germany, and the United Kingdom, who show the complexity and variety of responses that Marechera's writing evokes.

Writing my Reading Peter Horn, 2022-06-08. These essays are interventions in a cultural contestation in South Africa during the Seventies and Eighties. Some of them are more general in nature and were written in the first instance as public oral interventions in debates whose outcome contributed to the founding of South Africa's post-apartheid society. Other essays are more specifically aimed at poetic practices, particularly as these have been of crucial aesthetic and ultimately ethical importance in a critical phase of South Africa's painful development. Intimate knowledge of and personal involvement in the commitment of literature to concrete political situations informs these succinct and spirited essays, along with Horn's measured familiarity with European traditions of political, cultural, and ideological thought. The topics covered include the social context of South African poetry, poetry and apartheid, the praise-singing tradition, and the liberation struggle. German documentary theatre and South African workers' theatre, the necessity of popular culture, post-Freudian readings, and feminist aesthetics, censorship and society, and essays on individual South African poets: Jeremy Cronin, Wopko Jensma, Abduraghiem Johnstone, Mzwakhe Mbuli, Mongane Serote, Ari Sitas.

Zimbabwean Literature in African Languages Emmanuel Chiwome, Zifikile Mguni, 2012. The scope of this book is Ndebele and Shona literature with emphasis on post-independence publications African literature in English has received more critical attention than literature in indigenous languages The former has occupied centre stage as representing national literature while modern literature in indigenous languages occupies the intermediate lower stratum that is accorded to national languages in the colonial and post independence eras The objective of the study is to combine some of the different genres of literature in indigenous languages in an attempt to understand them on the basis of their common history and culture While colonialism has promoted and interpreted differences among Zimbabwean ethnic communities as evidence of polarisation the authors here view African language literatures as parts of one great whole
