

Shawshank Redemption - The power of an individual's will and hope

This is the story of Andy Dufresne (Tim Robbins), the vice-president of a bank, convicted of his wife's murder. Andy states that he has been falsely accused, but all evidence points towards Andy and nobody else. As a result, he is sent to the Shawshank prison, to serve a double life sentence. In comes Red (Morgan Freeman), he is a convict serving a sentence at the Shawshank prison. He is the ever-popular prisoner, adept at getting things smuggled into the prison at fellow prisoner's requests. He finds Andy to be a rather different person. Initially, Andy is withdrawn and introvert. Later, he approaches Red regarding a deal. Red gets the required item smuggled in for him.

Later on, Slowly, Red and Andy both forge a good friendship. They tread through the years facing oppression, pain, despair, experiencing some great moments of solidarity and in Red's case, some useless rehabilitation checks wherein he's always rejected. Andy is given work at the prison library. He slowly gains reputation among the guards helping them with all sorts of bank related stuff: Taxes, Loans, Education of kids etc. Even the warden starts getting his regular accounts done by Andy. And so the years roll on. Through the years, nobody concedes to the idea of Andy being innocent, because apparently, at a prison, "everybody's innocent". But years later, the arrival of a new prison inmate Tommy (Gil Bellows) changes the world forever. The consequent revelation leads to a crazy drive inside Andy to seek "salvation". What happens next is one of the greatest sequences of cinematic history. It is the human tendency to redeem oneself that leads us to all the great moments in life. This is what The Shawshank Redemption is all about.
