

Sherlock Holmes the Important Exam Paper

Sherlock Holmes and I went on a visit to one of our great university cities. Perhaps somebody here will have a problem, Holmes, I said, and come to you for help. "I'm going to be busy with other work, Watson," Holmes said. "I want to look at some books at the university. I don't want other people's problems. But somebody did want help. Hilton Soames, a teacher at the university, came to see us. He was a tall, thin man and was very excited about something. Can you give me an hour or two of your time, Mr Holmes?" he asked. Something happened this afternoon. I'm very busy, Holmes said. Perhaps the police can help you. Why don't you ask them? No, no, nor the police, Mr Soames said. "We don't want strangers to know about this problem. You're the right person, Mr Holmes. Only you can help. All right, Holmes said. Tell me. What happened?" "Tomorrow is the first day of some important exams, Mr Soames said. "The exam papers are, of course, secret. Every student would like to see them before the exam, so we are very careful with them. I teach Greek, and at three o'clock today the Greek exam paper arrived in my office. I had to read it carefully for the last time, because there can be no mistakes. But at four-thirty I went out to a friend's house for tea. I left the exam paper three pages on my desk, but I locked my door. How long were you out?" Holmes asked. "For about an hour, Mr Soames answered. When I came back, there was a key in my door! It wasn't my key. I had my key in my coat. Does your servant have a key?"

Yes Mr. Soames. Bannister is a good man, Mr Holmes, but it was his key. He visited my room five or ten minutes after I left it. "Why?" Holmes asked. "He brings me tea every afternoon. Today he forgot about the visit to my friend. And he left his key in your door when he went out," Holmes said. Yes. He's usually very careful, but "But not today," Holmes said. "No, not today," Mr Soames said. "So you went into your room?" "Yes, and the exam paper was there, but only one page was on the desk. "Where were the other two pages?" "One was on the table near the window. The other page was on the floor. Holmes was suddenly interested. "The first page was on the floor," he said slowly. "The second page was on the table near the window. And the third page was on your desk. Am I right?" "Yes, that's right!" Mr Soames said. How do you know that?" Finish your very interesting story, Holmes told him. "I called Bannister," Mr Soames said. "He felt ill when I told him about the exam paper. I asked him, "Did you look at my papers?" He said no, and he is a good man, Mr Holmes. I gave him a glass of wine and he sat down. Next, I looked carefully round the room. "Did you find anything?" Holmes asked. "Yes!" Mr Soames said. Somebody broke a pencil near the table by the window. "How do you know?" "There were small pieces of wood from a pencil on the table, Mr Soames said. "And that's not all. There was a very small piece of black clay on the table, too."

That's interesting, Holmes said. One more thing, Mr Soames. "I have a new desk but said, but now there's a cut on it!" Holmes thought for a minute or two, then he said, "I'll help you, Mr Soames. Now, tell me something. Did anybody visit you in your room after the exam paper
