THE STUNT PILOT

For years he thrilled audiences with his daredevil maneuvers. Then one day he ran out of sky

DAVE KAHN LIVED in Bellingham, Washington, north of Seattle. Bellingham, a harbor town, lay between the alpine North Cascade Mountains and the San Juan Islands in Puget Sound. The harbor is that of New Bedford. Dave Kahn was a stunt pilot, the city's own genius.

In 1934, with a newspaper's willingness to try anything once, I attended the Bellingham Air Fair. The Bellingham airport was a wide clearing on a hill of tall Douglas firs, no towers, no small planes. It was low. It wasn't even raining, the air was cold and dry, though warning that in an upper system, wind fronts on the coast were gathering and storms outside the valley deep. In the forecast for June, you never worried because you could, even more of the night, if you could think up something to do. The sky did not darken until 10:00 or so, and it never got very dark, no stars, no moon, no moon, the sun never dropped sufficient degrees of arc to let the horizon to take you from horizon.

For the end of the day, organized from all other performances of every sort, the air show had scheduled a program called "Dave Kahn." The harbor said he had flown for King Hussein in Jordan. A call came to the crowd told me King Hussein had seen Kahn fly on a visit to North America, he had flown him to Jordan to perform at ceremonies. Hussein was a prince, too. "Hussein thought he was the greatest thing in the world," Kahn was also a gentleman who taught at Western Washington University.

Stunt Pilot By Annie Dillard:

Seeking Awareness in American Nature Writing Scott Slovic, 1992 Performing Prose Chris Holcomb, M. Jimmie Killingsworth, 2010-05-06 In Performing Prose authors Chris Holcomb and M. Jimmie Killingsworth breathe new life into traditional concepts of style. Drawing on numerous examples from a wide range of authors and genres, Holcomb and Killingsworth demonstrate the use of style as a vehicle for performance—a way for writers to project themselves onto the page while managing their engagement with the reader. By addressing style and rhetoric not as an editorial afterthought but as a means of social interaction, they equip students with the vocabulary and tools to analyze the styles of others in fresh ways as well as create their own. Whereas most writing texts focus exclusively on analysis or techniques to improve writing, Holcomb and Killingsworth blend these two schools of thought to provide a singular process of thinking about writing. They discuss not only the benefits of conventional methods but also the use of deviation from tradition, the strategies authors use to vary their style, and the use of such vehicles as images, tropes, and schemes. The goal of the authors is to provide writers with stylistic footing, an understanding of the ways writers use style to orchestrate their relationships with readers, subject matter, and rhetorical situations. Packed with useful tips and insights, this comprehensive volume investigates every aspect of style and its use to present an indispensable resource for both students and scholars. Performing Prose moves beyond customary studies to provide a refreshing and informative approach to the concepts and strategies of writing.
