Vancouver Short Stories Carole Gerson, 1985 In a sense we haven't got an identity until somebody tells our story The fiction makes us real Robert Kroetsch in Creation Spanning a period of nearly eighty years the stories in this collection present the experience of living in Vancouver as filtered through the imagination of many of Canada's most famous writers The romantic attitude of some of the early writers is balanced by the more sombre version of many later authors some of whom show the city as a place of loneliness and corruption In tone the stories range from the grimness of Dorothy Livesay's account of Depression misery to the irony of Ethel Wilson's narrative of an evening garden party to the playfulness of George Bowering's elliptical story of student life Other well known authors include Pauline Johnson Emily Carr Malcolm Lowry Audrey Thomas Alice Munro and Joy Kogawa as well as some who have been undeservedly consigned to obscurity M A Grainger Bertrand Sinclair Jean Burton and William McConnell The more prolific among the younger writers Frances Duncan Cynthia Flood and Kevin Roberts are in the process of achieving national recognition The stories evoke a strong sense of place of Vancouver's essential relation to its natural setting forest mountains and sea and its existence as a modern urban centre Individual episodes recall the great fire of 1886 turn of the century loggers on Cordova Street rum running in the twenties the internment of Japanese Canadians after Pearl Harbor the hippie era and the modern sub culture of beer parlours and drugs Particular locales include downtown streets the east end the North Shore U B C Stanley Park Kitsilano and the Vancouver Aquarium Stories of the city's social and cultural life describe the process of growing up and growing old family and marital matters the Chinese community and the legends and reality of Native Americans Vancouver Short Stories indicates some of the ways that a particular locality has been transformed into art that in turn enriches our understanding of its reality and enhances our sense of identity

Views of the Salish Sea Howard Macdonald Stewart, 2017-09-30 It is not mere coincidence that two thirds of the population of British Columbia occupies lands bordering its great inland sea the Strait of Georgia and connected waterways collectively known as the North Salish Sea Averaging forty kilometres in width and stretching some three hundred kilometres from Vancouver and Victoria in the south to Powell River and Campbell River in the north the North Salish Sea has long sheltered a bounty of habitable lands and rich maritime resources ideal for human settlement While the region s intricate shoreline of peninsulas promontories estuaries and plains has been occupied by human communities for millennia the last century and a half has been an unprecedented age of rapid colonization industrialization and globalization Many books have been written about individual communities and industries around the great waterway but none have examined the region as a geographical unit with its own dynamic systems which can best be understood as an interrelated whole The Strait of Georgia has influenced human affairs even as people have changed the Strait in a complex relationship that continues today British colonization and the commodification of the Strait s resources launched a resource rush around the sea that began in earnest in the decades before the First World War often at the expense of Indigenous populations Coal mining developed earliest and grew rapidly Fishing lumbering and metal mining were also established by the 1880s and soon experienced exponential growth From the earliest salmon canneries to today s cruise ship industry all have depended on the Strait to ensure economic prosperity and the easy movement of people and goods As competition for space and resources increases and as the effects of climate change are amplified the pressure on this ecologically vulnerable area will only intensify If this precious sea is to be passed to future generations with any semblance of its inherent richness and diversity intact then it will need to be effectively managed and vigorously defended The first step is to understand the complex story of the region making this essential reading not only for history buffs but anyone with an interest in the future of British Columbia

Vancouver Past: Essays in Social History Robert A. J. McDonald, Jean Barman, 1986-01-01 Focusing on Vancouver s social history the essays written for this special edition of BC Studies treat hitherto neglected areas of the city s past and bring new insights into how its residents lived and worked Receiving particular attention is the socio economic and residential structure of Vancouver with one author arguing that the city s economy created an urban working class which was at once more complex and politically more conservative than that of the highly polarized communities on Vancouver Island and in the Interior
