Vision in Cephalopods Frederike Diana Hanke, Daniel Colaco Osorio, 2018-03-13 Cephalopods usually have large and mobile eyes with which they constantly scan their environment The eyes of cephalopods are single chamber eyes which show resemblance to vertebrate eyes However there are marked differences such as the cephalopod eye having an everted retina instead of an inverted retina found in vertebrates Their visual system allows the cephalopods depending on species to discriminate objects on the basis of their shapes or sizes images from mirror images or to learn from the observation of others The cephalopod visual system is also polarization sensitive and controls camouflage an extraordinary ability almost exclusive to all cephalopods they are capable of rapidly adapting their body coloration as well as altering their body shape to any background in almost any condition and even during self motion Visual scene analysis ultimately leads to motor outputs that cause an appropriate change in skin coloration or texture by acting directly on chromatophores or papillae in the skin Mirroring these numerous functions of the visual system large parts of the cephalopod brain are devoted to the processing of visual information This research topic focuses on current advances in the knowledge of cephalopod vision It is designed to facilitate merging questions approaches and data available through the work of different researchers working on different aspects of cephalopod vision Thus the research topic creates mutual awareness and facilitates the growth of a field of research with a long tradition cephalopod vision visual perception and cognition as well as the mechanisms of camouflage This research topic emerged from a workshop on Vision in cephalopods as part of the COST Action FA1301

Zooplankton Petra. H. Lenz, 2021-09-10

Zooplankton is a major work of reference for researchers in plankton biology physiology and behavior which combines behavioral and psychological approaches to the study of plankton on present and interdisciplinary investigation of sensory processes in pelagic environments The breadth of perspective thus achieved provides valuable insights into the larger scale ecological processes of biological productivity community structure and population dynamics Technological advances in almost all aspects of biological research have opened up opportunities for a re examination of the sensory ecology of planktonic organisms In this wide ranging collection leading researchers in planktonic behavior and physiology address the rapidly developing interface between these two major areas The studies presented range from the laboratory to the field and from the cell to the whole organism but share the common goal of understanding the special sensory world of organisms that live in pelagic environments and how their behavior and physiology relate to it

Seafood Processing By-Products Se-Kwon Kim, 2014-04-08

The seafood processing industry produces a large amount of by products that usually consist of bioactive materials such as proteins enzymes fatty acids and biopolymers These by products are often underutilized or wasted even though they have been shown to have biotechnological nutritional pharmaceutical and biomedical applications For example by products derived from crustaceans and algae have been successfully applied in place of collagen and gelatin in food cosmetics drug delivery and tissue engineering Divided into four parts and consisting of twenty seven chapters this book discusses seafood by product development isolation and characterization and demonstrates the importance of seafood by products for the pharmaceutical nutraceutical and biomedical industries
