What does a cash strapped government do when the collective agreements for almost a quarter million of its unionized employees expire simultaneously while wishing to maintain a respectful relationship with its labour supporters In 1997 the Premier of British Columbia BC Canada Glen Clark thought of an imaginative solution It was to offer unions an opportunity to participate with the government in developing policies on issues affecting their members and the services they provide This was BC s public sector policy Accord process The goal was to establish a different more collaborative relationship with unions one in which they had a voice in shaping policy solutions This parallel process entirely separate from collective bargaining would also avoid the adversarial relationship that so often characterizes a government s relations with its unions by recognizing the positive role unions and their members could play in contributing to improving BC s public programs and services The authors who worked on the Accord process with Premier Clark provide an insider s story of the intensive three year period during which the parties negotiated 35 policy accords across the entire provincial public sector The Accords covered a wide range of issues including pension trusteeship and portability early retirement provincial school class size benefits trusts government procurement policy hospital laboratory services workforce training pay equity creation of a health and safety agency and numerous smaller policy fixes The accord process demonstrated that it was possible for a government to initiate a new and more collaborative relationship with its unions by inviting them into the policy process The accords definitely improved relations with the government and contributed to collective bargaining settlements within the government s money mandate      Friends' Weekly Intelligencer ,1898      Friends' Intelligencer ,1908      Containing the history of the house of Douglas David Hume,1743      American Journal of Education and College Review ,1872 Vol 25 is the report of the commissioner of education for 1880 v 29 report for 1877
