Sex, Economy, Freedom & Community Wendell Berry, 1993 In this new collection of essays Wendell Berry continues his work as one of America's most necessary social commentators With wisdom and clear ringing prose he tackles head on some of the most difficult problems which face us as we near the end of the twentieth century Berry begins the title essay with the Anita Hill Clarence Thomas hearings as an example of a process that has been well established and well respected for at least two hundred years the process of community disintegration Community a locally understood interdependence of local people local culture local economy and local nature bound by trust and affection is being destroyed by the desires and ambitions of both private and public life which for want of the intervention of community interests are also destroying one another He then moves on to elucidate connections between sexual brutality and economic brutality and the role of art and free speech Berry forcefully addresses America's unabashed pursuit of self liberation which he says is still the strongest force now operating in our society As individuals turn away from their community they conform to a rootless and placeless monoculture of commercial expectations and products buying into the very economic system which is destroying the earth our communities and all they represent Throughout the book Berry asks What is appropriate What is worth conserving from our past and preserving in our present What is it to be human and truly connected to others What does it mean to be free

People of the Book David Lyle Jeffrey, 1996 The author examines the cultural and literary identity among Western Christians which the centrality of the Book has helped to create and the Christian use of the phrase People of the book Preface

We Are All Treaty People Roger Epp, 2008-12-18

In his collection of Prairie essays Roger Epp considers what it means to dwell attentively and responsibly in the rural West. We Are All Treaty People invites those who feel the pull of a prairie heritage to rediscover the poetry surging through the landscapes of the rural West among its people and their political economy. Inhabited by Stories Nancy A. Barta-Smith, Danette DiMarco, 2012-11-30

Intertextuality has signaled change appropriation adaptation and derivation. It has focused readers on irresolvable questions of influence and origination progressive or regressive movement across continents periods and media. Inhabited by Stories Critical Essays on Tales Retold takes a different approach. What would a model of literary study look like that steps out of time's river and embraces not only the presence and proximity of the world to the senses but also of the past and the future to the present here and now? When stories inhabit us imagination and memory extend our ability to see and feel. Phenomenological experience is lived not just thought. Such a perspective suggests that the past and future inhabit the present increase the depth of sensory perception itself and enrich the range of our affective and ethical responses. Grounded in the lived experience of reading this perspective offers an alternative to an idea of intertextuality as simply following lines of influence and appropriation. It focuses on the expansion of experience created by telling and retelling stories. Ironically for literary theorists and critics perhaps the highest form of both praise and critique is a tale retold since such retellings attest to literature's instructive power and its perennial regeneration. Making Nature Sacred John Gatta, 2004-10-14

Since colonial times the sense of encountering an unseen transcendental Presence within the natural world has been a characteristic motif in American literature and culture. American writers have repeatedly perceived in nature something beyond itself and beyond themselves. In this book John Gatta argues that the religious import of American environmental literature has yet to be fully recognized or understood. Whatever their theology American writers have perennially construed the nonhuman world to be a source in Rachel Carson's words of something that takes us out of ourselves. Making Nature Sacred explores how the quest for natural revelation has been pursued through successive phases of American literary and intellectual history. And it shows how the imaginative challenge of reading landscapes has been influenced by biblical hermeneutics. Though focused on adaptations of Judeo-Christian religious traditions it also samples Native American African American and Buddhist forms of ecospirituality. It begins with Colonial New England writers such as Anne Bradstreet and Jonathan Edwards re-examines pivotal figures such as Henry Thoreau and John Muir and takes account of writings by Mary Austin Rachel Carson and many others along the way. The book concludes with an assessment of the spiritual renaissance underway in current environmental writing as represented by five noteworthy poets and by authors such as Wendell Berry Annie Dillard Marilynne Robinson Peter Matthiessen and Barry Lopez. This engaging study should appeal not only to students of literature but also to those interested in ethics and environmental studies religious studies and American cultural history. What I Stand On: the Collected Essays of Wendell Berry 1969-2017 Wendell Berry, 2019

Chanequa Walker-Barnes, 2019-10-01 Disrupting the racist and sexist biases in conversations on reconciliation Chanequa Walker Barnes offers a compelling argument that the Christian racial reconciliation movement is incapable of responding to modern day racism She demonstrates how reconciliation's roots in the evangelical male centered Promise Keepers movement has resulted in a patriarchal and largely symbolic effort focused upon improving relationships between men from various racial ethnic groups Walker Barnes argues that highlighting the voices of women of color is critical to developing any genuine efforts toward reconciliation Drawing upon intersectionality theory and critical race studies she demonstrates how living at the intersection of racism and sexism exposes women of color to unique experiences of gendered racism that are not about relationships but rather are about systems of power and inequity Refuting the idea that race and racism are one size fits all I Bring the Voices of My People highlights the particular work that White Americans must do to repent of racism and to work toward racial justice and offers a constructive view of reconciliation that prioritizes eliminating racial injustice and healing the damage that it has done to African Americans and other people of color
