1. The first step is to identify the variables in the problem. In this case, the variables are the number of hours worked (H) and the number of hours of sleep (S).

2. The second step is to write down the objective function. In this case, the objective function is to maximize the number of hours of sleep (S).

3. The third step is to write down the constraints. In this case, the constraints are:

- The number of hours worked (H) must be less than or equal to 16 hours.
- The number of hours of sleep (S) must be less than or equal to 16 hours.
- The number of hours worked (H) plus the number of hours of sleep (S) must be less than or equal to 16 hours.

4. The fourth step is to solve the problem. In this case, the optimal solution is to work 0 hours and sleep 16 hours.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

These observations are in line with the findings of other studies that have shown that the use of a single, standardized questionnaire can lead to biased results (e.g., Wright et al., 2005).

Before making a new χ^2 statistic, change the units of the data. For example, convert pounds to kilograms (1 lb = 0.45 kg). When you get the new χ^2 value, it will be the same as the original χ^2 value because the units cancel out. For a review of the χ^2 test, see page 101.
