Describing the Irish as female and bestial is a practice dating back to the twelfth century while for women inside and outside of Ireland their association with children animals and other savages has had a long history A link among systems of oppression has been asserted in recent decades by some feminists but linking women s rights with animal advocacy can be controversial This strategy responds to the fact that women s inferiority has been alleged and justified by appropriating them to nature an appropriation that colonialism has also practiced on its racial and cultural others Nineteenth century feminists braved such associations for instance often asserting vegetarianism as a form of rebellion against the dominant culture Vegetarianism and animal advocacy have uniquely Irish implications This study examines a tradition of Irish women writers deploying the natural as a gesture of resistance to paternalist regulation of female energies and as a self consciously elaborated stage for the performance of Irish identity They call into question the violent dislocations and disavowals required by figurative practices particularly when utilizing Irish topography an already unnatural cultural construct shaped by conflict and suffering The Parting Gift, and Other Poems Harriette Pain Morgan,2016-05-17 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work was reproduced from the original artifact and remains as true to the original work as possible Therefore you will see the original copyright references library stamps as most of these works have been housed in our most important libraries around the world and other notations in the work This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work As a reproduction of a historical artifact this work may contain missing or blurred pages
