Cooperation in Chinese Communities Charles Stafford, Ellen R. Judd, Eona Bell, 2018-12-13 When humans cooperate what are the social and psychological mechanisms that enable them to do so successfully Is cooperativeness something natural for humans built in to our species over the course of evolution or rather something that depends on cultural learning and social interaction This book addresses these central questions concerning human nature and the nature of cooperation The editors present a wide range of vivid anthropological case studies focused on everyday cooperation in Chinese communities for example between children in

Nanjing playing a ballgame parents in Edinburgh organising a community school villagers in Yunnan dealing with common pool resource problems and families in Kinmen in Taiwan worshipping their dead together On the one hand these case studies illustrate some uniquely Chinese cultural factors such as those related to kinship ideals and institutions that shape the experience and practice of cooperation They also illustrate on the other hand how China's recent history not least the rise and fall of collectivism in various forms continues to shape the experience of cooperation for ordinary people in China today Finally they show that in spite of the cultural and historical particularity of Chinese cooperation it does share some underlying features that would be familiar to people coming from radically different backgrounds
